AKRON, CAUGHT IN STORM, ASKS AID IN LANDING

Signals to San Angelo, Tex., for Crew of 500 Men.

ELECTRICAL DISPLAY CAUSES COMMAND

Airship Doubles Back on Finding Herself Center of Disturbance.

San Francisco, May 9 (U.P.).—The dirigible Akron will remain over San Antonio Tex., until a severe thunderstorm directly along its route to El Paso subsides, a radio message to the Navy radio station here said tonight.

San Angelo, Tex., May 9 (A.P.).—The Naval dirigible Akron at 11:20 p. m. (C. S. T.), signaled to land at the San Angelo Airport and called for a landing crew of 500 men. The giant ship had encountered electrical disturbances and storms between San Antonio, Tex., and San Angelo and more were in prospect west of San Angelo.

The Akron heading from Lakehurst, N. J., to the West Coast, first flew over San Angelo at 10:30 p. m. (C. S. T.), flying low and continuing west. A short time later it doubled back.

The ship sent flashlight signals to operators on the ground asking that the city's entire population be congregated if necessary in an attempt to ground the dirigible.

Thunderstorms were reported in virtually all directions and there was a violent electrical display west of San Angelo on the ship's route to the Pacific coast for naval maneuvers.

Passes San Antonio.

San Antonio, Tex., May 9 (A.P.).—The Navy dirigible Akron, en route from Lakehurst, N. J., to Sunnyvale, Calif., to participate in naval maneuvers, passed over this city at 7:30 p. m. Central standard time. Its next immediate objective is El Paso, Tex.

Rains and squally winds threatened to give the Akron a test as the Navy's monster dirigible rode the skies of the Lone Star State. Forecasts indicated the world's largest airship with its crew of 80 might encounter rough going.

In a radio report on the Akron's progress, however, Commander C. E. Rosendahl gave no indication that a bit of bad weather was any cause for concern.

The sun was shining but there were patches of heavy clouds as the ship soared over downtown Houston at 3:55 p. m. Central standard time, moving slowly in a westerly direction. A squadron of Texas National Guard planes acted as air escort.

The great craft's mighty motors were roaring rhythmically. Hundreds of spectators, atop tall buildings, waved hail and farewell as she glided overhead, the afternoon sun blazing upon her sides.

Canada Ratifies Pact For Arms Supervision

Ottawa, Ont., May 9 (A.P.).—The House of Commons today approved the international convention for the supervision of the international trade in arms and ammunition, signed at Geneva June 17, 1925. Prime Minister Bennett told the House the convention became enforceable four months after fourteen countries had ratified it. Thirteen of the 37 signatory countries already have deposited their ratifications.

Canada joined with the United Kingdom and Australia in the reservation that would make the convention applicable to this country only when the principal arms-producing countries had ratified it.

The selection of the headquarters for the Texas and California delegations will be made by Silliman Evans, of Fort Worth, at the direction of Representative Sam Rayburn, national representative of the Texas "Garner-for-President" committee.

After a conference with Mr. Rayburn, Mr. Evans said, a "Garner-for-President Club" would be formed within a short time in New York City "by the thousands of Texans dwelling there."

Herriot Seen As Liberal in World Issues

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

French foreign policy with regard to reparations and disarmament is expected to assume a more liberal trend under the leadership of Edouard Herriot, it was generally conceded yesterday as the result of the French elections.

Official reaction was lacking in the absence of indications from Paris whether M. Herriot would cooperate with a left group under the domination of Leon Blum, or with the remnants of Premier Tardieu's Nationalist right elements.

The Socialist party has heretofore refused to cooperate with any political set-up which did not permit them to dominate the political program of the government. However, the political affinity between the pure Socialists and the Radical Socialists was conceded to be so close that a government of strong left tendencies is expected to be formed during the present week.

With the perennial Mayor of Lyons as premier of France, the foreign

REICH BUDGET DROPS REPARATIONS FUNDS

New Finance Estimates Just Offered Provide Only for Paying Interest.

Berlin, May 9 (A.P.).—A budget which makes no provision for further reparations payments was presented today before the Reichstag, when it reconvened after a recess of 10 weeks.

In listing expenditures for the coming year, Finance Minister Hermann Dietrich said 700,000,000 marks ($165,900,000) would be used for interest and amortization on funded floating debts and reparations loans—which meant that while interest charges on the Dawes and Young loans would continue, no funds had been earmarked for further reparations.

The Reichstag, exceptionally well behaved after its recess, was informed that the budget would balance with 8,300,000,000 marks ($1,697,100,000) income. Another outstanding development of the first day of the session was a Communist demand for an investigation to determine whether any Germans were involved in scandals connected with the late Ivor Kreuger, Swedish industrialist.

Because of the Whitsuntide holidays the session will last only four

Wyoming Pledges Roosevelt 6 Votes

Delegates for National Referendum on Eighteenth Amendment.

Casper, Wyo., May 9 (A.P.).—Delegates to the Wyoming State Democratic convention voted unanimously tonight to pledge the six Wyoming votes in the party's national convention to Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

J. C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democratic national committeeman who was a leader four years ago in swinging the West for Alfred E. Smith, was elected to the national platform committee.

A prohibition plank recommending that the eighteenth amendment be submitted to a national referendum was placed in the platform also by unanimous vote.

PAINLEVE OUT; LE BRUN LIKELY FRENCH LEADER

SOCIALISTS' MEETING WIL FIX NEW POLICY

Tardieu, Resigning, May Keep Post Until June 1 in Unusual Situation.

Paris, May 9 (A.P.).—A new president for France will be elected tomorrow, and presumably he will be Albert Lebrun, now president of the Senate. Simultaneously, Premier Andrew Tardieu will present the resignation of his government, with a request that it be accepted immediately.

Unless unforeseen political contingencies should arise, M. Lebrun will be formally placed in the Elysee Palace to succeed the assassinated Paul Doumer. Lebrun's only opponent, Paul Painleve, former premier, withdrew his candidacy late tonight, leaving the field clear.

This was in line with the suggestions from the Senate, where it was held that in view of the sadness of the occasion it would be fitting that one candidate be named on a single ballot.

Unusual Situation.

The election hall of Versailles Palace was hastily prepared tonight for tomorrow's meeting. Precautions were taken by the police to see that no untoward incidents occurred, and it was noted that fewer entrance cards were issued than usual, especially to foreigners.

It was intimated today that Premier Tardieu's cabinet would remain in office until the new Chamber of Deputies is organized on June 1, but the ministers' duties will be perfunctory only.

This step of formal resignation, and yet continuance in office, is somewhat unusual in French parliamentary history. It was decided upon today by the cabinet, however, as a result of the decisive defeat suffered by the Tardieu Conservative government in the Chamber of Deputies elections Sunday.

Control of the new chamber rests with the Radical Socialists and the Socialists, with former Premier Edouard Herriott the most likely successor to the premiership.

Power of Socialists.

Golder to Run, Despite His Defeat in Primary

Philadelphia, May 9 (A.P.).—Representative Benjamin M. Golder, of the Fourth Congressional District, announced today that, despite his defeat at the primary by Deputy Coroner Arthur M. Sellers, he will be a candidate for reelection in November.

He said he would not contest the primary election further, but reiterated his charges that adherents of Sellers had committed wholesale election law violations to insure Sellers' Republican nomination.

More Slides Peril 1,600 Frenchmen

Lyons, France, May 9 (A.P.).—The 1,600 inhabitants of the village of St. Genix-Sur-Guiers and nearby inhabitants were fleeing down the mountainside tonight from several huge landslides.

Loosened by heavy rains, about 7,500,000 cubic feet of saturated earth threatened to cover the town, which is 30 miles east of Lyons, and 20 miles west of Chambery, in Savoie Province.

Three houses and 1,000 trees were destroyed by landslides in and near the town today, and seven more houses were in immediate danger of destruction.

Reports at Chambery had it that the farmers were taking their families down the slopes into the Guiers River Valley, leaving all their household goods and their cattle behind them.

Meanwhile 24 persons of the 51 tenants of two buildings which were wrecked by landslides on the outskirts of Lyons yesterday were still missing, and presumably buried in the debris.

JURY CONVICTS TWO IN POLICE SHOOTING

Yudelevit and Kendrick Are Jailed, for Sentence in Wounding of Bacon.

Harry Yudelevit and John Kendrick were committed to jail early last night by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in the District Supreme Court, after both had been found guilty of assault with intent to kill and assault with a dangerous weapon upon Policeman Thomas D. Bacon.

The two defendants won a point shortly before the case was given to the jury when two of the four counts in the indictment were directed in their favor by Justice Letts who held that the Government had failed to substantiate these two counts.

Assistant United States Attorney Julian Richards, immediately after the jury, which had been out two hours, filed its report, asked that the two men be committed. Yudelevit had been at liberty on bond, but Kendrick, a New Jersey resident, had not been able to raise sufficient capital to secure his release. He is now a cellmate of Gaston B. Means.

Yudelevit and Kendrick were accused of shooting Bacon February 19, in front of 629 E street northwest. The policeman and a night watchman had observed Kendrick and his colleague in, what the officers termed, suspicious conduct, and when they went to question them, Kendrick shot Bacon in the foot and thigh, while Yudelevit held the night watchman at bay with a pistol.

Because of rumors that an attempt might be made to free them by force in the event they were found guilty, Chief Deputy United States Marshal John J. Clarkson had twelve deputies in the courtroom when the jury filed in.

Yudelevit was sought several months ago after an attempt had been made to hold up Bill Moses, local gambler, when he was making a

Greek Finance Official Resigns After Quarrel

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO MERGE ELECTRIC LINES

DETERMINED BATTLE IS LOST BY BLANTON

Senate Amendments Loom; Insurance and Oil Pipe Measures Adopted.

Merger of Washington traction lines, a project mooted in the Capital for 30 years, was approved yesterday by the House of Representatives, following a bitter one-man fight to defeat the measure.

The bill was approved by viva voce vote, largely as drafted by the Public Utilities Commission. Three significant amendments would prohibit traction taxicab operation, require that a majority of directors be chosen from District residents, and charge one-half the cost of paving between the tracks against the merged company.

Before passing the bill, the House by a vote of 192 to 100 turned down Representative Thomas L. Blanton's motion to recommit the measure pending Senate action. The Texas representative charged the House District committee had brought out a "half-cocked, half-baked, half-understood bill."

Other District Bills Passed.

Later the House passed three other District measures, permitting the Acacia Life Association to change its name and broaden activities, authorizing the laying of pipe lines into the Gulf Refining plant at South Capitol and I streets, and sanctioning closure of Water street, at Twenty-third street northwest, to make way for an American Pharmaceutical Association headquarters building.

The merger bill now goes to the Senate, which has pending a consolidation measure less liberal to the companies, carrying a total of 53 amendments to the Public Utilities Commission draft.

Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, in charge of the favorable majority report on the bill, last night began a check on the difference in the two measures. Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District committee has indicated her group would meet the Senate "half way" in conference.

Blanton Fights For Delay.

Representative Blanton, in his attack on the House merger bill, extolled Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, who has joined in a minority report on the Senate bill, opposing power, transfer and paving clauses. Representative Blanton asked the House to hold up action until Senator Capper, "the man most familiar with the merger," has had an oppor-

Huge Plane Lands Safely After Lightning Hits It

Croydon, England, May 9 (U.P.).—A giant four-motored Imperial Airways plane, carrying thirteen passengers, was struck by lightning today while flying over the Ton Bridge en route to Paris. The top wing of the plane was slightly damaged and the wireless equipment destroyed, but the craft returned safely to Croydon. The passengers proceeded to Paris in another plane.

The craft, named the Horatius, was flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet in the clouds when the lightning struck.

Amy Johnson Won By Flier Mollison

Engagement of Famous Aviators Announced in London.

London, May 9 (A.P.).—J. A. Mollison, English distance flier, who recently set a record for a flight between London and Capetown, today announced he was engaged to marry England's most famous air woman, Amy Johnson. Mollison met Miss Johnson two years ago, when she completed her fifteen-day solo flight from London to Port Darwin, Australia.

Mollison, on March 28 of this year, set a record of 4 days 17 hours 19 minutes for the 6,215-mile flight from England to Capetown. At one time he held the record from England to Australia.

Just before he took off for Capetown this year Mollison announced he was engaged to marry the 18-year-old Lady Diana Wellesley, the wedding to take place "when he got back home." Questioned tonight about that engagement, Mollison had nothing to say. It was learned that Miss Johnson was in Capetown when he arrived there at the end of his record flight.

HOPES OF COORDINATED ECONOMY ACTION RISE; SENATE GETS TAX BILL

Finance Group Confesses Reported Measure Is Short of Hopes.

BUDGET BALANCING ABILITY UNCERTAIN

Last-Minute Efforts Fail to Change Committee Draft of Measure.

By J. B. M'DONNELL.

The billion-dollar tax bill, approved by a finance committee sore with the burden of its responsibility, was favorably reported to the Senate yesterday with an acknowledgement that the bill did not represent the well-considered judgment of committee members.

As a matter of fact, several members of the committee made no secret of the fact that they would make an active fight on the Senate floor against various provisions of the tremendous tax bill, to the total of which they committed themselves in the heat of campaign to balance the Federal budget in the next fiscal year.

Although the new tax bill, which imposes the greatest peace-time tax burden in history at a time of widely proclaimed world economic depression, is supposed to balance the Federal budget, it will not do so, unless there is an exorbitant increase in the revenues the various taxes will produce over the amount it is now estimated will be scraped into the Federal Treasury.

Budget Balancing Pledge.

To supplement the tax bill there must be various cuts and slashes in Government expenditures, the proposal for which are generally grouped under the head of economy, despite the fact that some would cost the Government more money than their sponsors estimate would be saved.

The budget-balancing pledge of the tax bill framers also assumes that the United States Government will receive war debt payments due it in the next few months. Privately, members who framed the bill admit their belief that there is grave doubt that this country will receive from other countries the war moneys due it. They are hopeful, however, that the various factors which indicate that the unprecedented tax bill will not balance the Federal budget will be overlooked in the general hubbub and the American people and the world generally will accept the new tax bill as proof of the virility of Congress and the United States and a determination to balance the budget.

Senator Reed Smoot (Republican),

BUSINESS PUTS HOPE IN TAX BILL BY JUNE

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Definite assurances that both the House and Senate would make a serious effort to dispose of the essential balance-the-budget legislation before June 1, as conveyed to ranking administration officials, spread new hope in business and financial circles yesterday that the heavy pall of uncertainty which has crippled recovery efforts for the last six weeks might soon begin to lift.

Despite a more-than-seasonal increase in currency circulation during the last two weeks, in reversal of the encouraging declining tendency which had been in evidence for some two months, yesterday's feeling, both among Government officials and in the principal security markets, reflected more confidence in the general political outlook than has been apparent since mid-March.

In all quarters there has been a

Special Group in Senate Planned as Agency for Attempt.

BOTH PARTY CHIEFS SUPPORT PROGRAM

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

New hope for coordinated action toward sweeping Federal economies was held out yesterday in House and Senate. A special Senate appropriation subcommittee is planned as agent for the concerted effort. Senate leaders, agreed on a nonpartisan plan of procedure, received friendly overtures from the Democratic House economy committee.

Harmony on the bipartisan subcommittee method of approach came spontaneously during a Senate economy debate, culminating a week-end of White House retrenchment conferences.

Hunt for Huge Savings.

Senators Joseph T. Robinson and James E. Watson, Democratic and Republican leaders respectively, spoke in favor of this method. Later Appropriations Chairman Wesley L. Jones indicated he had the plan under consideration but had reached no decision.

Unofficially, it was said the subcommittee may comprise three Republicans and three Democrats who would comb the whole field of economy in an effort to find the $237,000,000 in savings, over and above revenue benefits, necessary to budget balancing.

Willingness to cooperate was shown immediately by the House economy committee which met in executive conference yesterday afternoon. Chairman John McDuffie (Democrat), Alabama, and Representative C. William Ramseyer (Republican), Iowa, were delegated to confer with Senate leaders as "friends at court."

Rebuilding Omnibus Bill.

Representatives McDuffie and Ramseyer called on Senators Watson and Robinson to proffer their offices in whatever effort is made to rebuild the omnibus bill. The economy committee felt their knowledge of the House bill would benefit the Senate appropriations committee in reshaping the program, Mr. Ramseyer said.

Developments came quick and fast during the Senate economy debate, which opened with a heated discussion of the Oddie resolution to rescind the order cutting Postoffice-Treasury appropriations 10 per cent under House figures. In the end the resolution was referred to the Senate appropriations committee.

Other developments were:

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, introduced a joint resolution calling for a committee comprising the President or his representative and two members of the House and Senate, to work out a program for reducing expenditures

Fall Leaves Prison, Heading For El Paso in Ambulance

Former Secretary of Interior in No Better Health Than When He Entered Penitentiary 9 Months and 19 Days Ago, Doctor Declares.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., May 9 (A.P.).—Albert B. Fall, who was convicted of accepting a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, while Secretary of the Interior, was freed today from the New Mexico State Penitentiary, after serving 9 months and 19 days of a year and a day sentence.

Fall, reclining on pillows in a long shiny blue limousine ambulance, passed the portals of the prison at 1:22 p. m.

Followed by members of his family, the former Harding Cabinet member immediately began a trip to El Paso by way of the now famous Tres Rios ranch, where he will stop overnight.

Fall, who entered prison a sick man, emerged in no better health, Dr. E. F. Fiske reported after examination of Fall at request of his family.

"He came into the penitentiary an invalid and he went out an invalid," said Dr. Fiske. "He is a year older now and his various chronic illnesses are progressive."

Dr. Fiske denied reports Fall had become ill mentally and declared "he has retained his grip." Fall, he said, had been fairly cheerful during his imprisonment.

Mrs. Fall and her two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Chase and Mrs. Jouett Elliott, followed the ambulance, which gathered speed as it left the prison.

Fall's release came after Warden Ed Swope of the penitentiary had engaged in a long distance argument with Federal officials in Washington over whether Fall had really served his full sentence.

Swope refused to release Fall until he received amended commitment papers which eliminated the phrase which provided that he should remain confined "until this fine is paid." The fine, $100,000, stands as a judgment against Fall, collectible when, and if, he gets the money.

Collection seems doubtful in view of repeated assertions by Fall that he had no money and the fact that his ranch at Three Rivers, N. Mex., has been claimed on a foreclosure

Reelection Sought By Mrs. Caraway

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, first woman to be elected to the Senate, last night filed notice of her candidacy for renomination in the State primary. The entry for renomination in the Democratic primary of August 9, was made by Mrs. Caraway after lengthy consideration.

She took the place of her late husband, Senator Thaddeus Caraway, last fall by appointment of the Governor of Arkansas. Subsequently, Mrs. Caraway received the indorsement of the Democratic State central committee for renomination to fill out the unexpired term of late Senator Caraway. She was nominated and elected.

Last night Mrs. Caraway filed for renomination in the election for a regular term. Her present term ends next March 4. In the contest for the nomination, the Arkansas woman faces a real fight. Seven candidates, including a former senator and a former governor, are in the race.

Charles R. Flint Returns After Strange Adventure

Retired Millionaire Builder of Trusts on Disappearance From Shoreham Spent Night in 75-Cent Baltimore Hotel Room.

Charles R. Flint, 82-year-old builder of trusts, was safe at his apartment at the Shoreham Hotel last night after having spent Sunday night in an entirely different setting. The retired millionaire industrial organizer, who disappeared from his Washington residence Sunday, spent that night in a 75-cent hotel room in Baltimore and borrowed 4 cents from the clerk to buy a return ticket, it was revealed.

The clerk, William White, saw Flint's picture in a newspaper with the story of his disappearance and told police how he had met the millionaire. He said the elderly man appeared in the Baltimore hotel attired in bedroom slippers, blue trousers, gray vest and frayed coat, and paid 75 cents for his room.

It was raining when he came into the lobby yesterday morning, White said, and the clerk offered to buy him a pair of rubbers. White related that Flint opened a small purse and gave him a dollar. The rubbers were purchased, and Flint then asked the price of a bus ticket to Boston. When he was told it was $7, he replied "That's too much," and asked the fare to Washington.

Told that it was $1 by bus, he counted his money and said he had only 96 cents. The hotel clerk told him "that's all right," and made up the missing 4 cents.

On his return to Washington the man was recognized by employes of a Sixteenth street hotel as he passed by, still wearing the bedroom slippers with the $1 pair of rubbers over them. They persuaded him to allow them to take him home. He offered no explanation for his disappearance.

He left ostensibly to go to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for an examination, for he was traced to Union Station, where ticket agents said a man answering his description purchased a ticket to that city, but no trace of him was found at the hospital.

Mr. Flint is known at the "Father of Trusts" and shaper of the desti-

GLASS CHARGES BANKS SHUNTED JUSTICE RULING

SOLICITOR FOR TAFT HELD THEM ILLEGAL

Democratic Attorney General "Buried" Opinion, Fiery Senator Declares.

(Associated Press.)

With pointing finger and pounding fist, Carter Glass, of Virginia, told the Senate yesterday that an opinion prepared by a Solicitor General under President Taft holding bank affiliates illegal was "suppressed" because of the "power and blandishments of inordinate wealth."

The result, he asserted, has been that "these institutions, declared by the Solicitor General of the United States to be engaged in illicit practices, were perhaps the greatest contributors to this riot of credit and inflation, forcing the country into almost an irreparable condition."

Refusing to be drawn into a "partisan" discussion with Senator Moses (Republican), New Hampshire, who promptly questioned him, Senator Glass said a later Attorney General, who was a Democrat, "declined to permit the opinion to be made public."

Glass described him as "another Attorney General, some years afterward elevated to a place of even higher distinction."

George W. Wickersham was Attorney General when Frederick W. Lehmann, who, Glass said, prepared the opinion, was Solicitor General. Lehmann served from 1910 to 1912. He died several months ago.

Official Failed to Act.

Glass said "the Attorney General at that time failed to act." The Virginian made his assertions during a vigorous two-hour speech which opened debate on his far-reaching measure intended primarily to prevent use of Federal Reserve funds for speculative purposes.

Denouncing banking affiliates, which would be sharply restricted by the Glass bill, he said his committee has ascertained that they were "one of the greatest contributions to the unprecedented disaster which has caused this almost incurable depression."

"They sent out their high-pressure salesmen," he shouted, "and literally filled the bank portfolios of this country with these investment securities."

National banking affiliates, which the Glass bill would restrict, are agencies created to perform various functions not strictly banking, particularly the marketing of securities.

Striding back and forth in the narrow space between desks, while members of the Senate, their chairs turned toward him, followed his words intently, Glass went on:

"'Right here I am tempted to say that a few days ago I came into possession of information that literally startled me. I learned that one of the most distinguished lawyers at the American bar, at one time president of the American Bar Association, solicitor general of the United States under President Taft, had given an exhaustive, searching opinion as to the legality of national bank affiliates.

Opinion Called Legal Classic.

"I venture to say that it's a legal classic, searching and sweeping and to the effect that national bank affiliates are absolutely illegal, that they contravene the national bank act, that the parent bank contravenes the national charter and that the affiliate in many instances contravenes the State statute and the charter of the State from which it derives its existence. Court opinion after court opinion of both inferior courts and Supreme Court of the United States are cited.

"No action was ever taken under this tremendously important opinion of the Solicitor General. Not only was no action taken, but it is within the confines of fact to say that the opinion was suppressed and few things have ever happened in this country that better illustrate the power and the blandishments of inordinate wealth, because the opinion dealt with institutions and individuals who had accumulated inordinate wealth.

"Solicitor General Lehmann's opinion, in my mind shows the activities of these affiliates are not only disastrous, as we now witness, but they are absolutely illegal."

Replying to questions from Moses, Glass said the present Attorney General permitted him to have a photostatic copy of the Lehmann opinion made.

Country Banks Suffering.

Senator Glass said that the Nation is suffering from a system under which country banks are in "involuntary servitude" to those in the financial centers.

Most of the Senate membership was seated around the former Democratic Secretary of the Treasury in a great semicircle as he charged that as a result of this system the large banks had "choked" the smaller institutions with "utterly worthless investment securities."

Glass, speaking slowly and deliberately, charged the State Department with part of the responsibility for the flotation of foreign securities which have in some cases depreciated almost to the vanishing point.

U. S. Can Now Toot Loud, Russian Lauds Our Jazz

By JOHN J. DALY

WITH the gathering of musicians in the Nation's Capital, to celebrate Bicentennial Music Week, comes word of encouragement from a Russian composer, Mme. Gretchaninoff, who says:

"The day is gone when it is necessary for Americans to send their children abroad to study music. More good music has been written in America in the past two decades than Europe has produced in 50 years."

This is news, with a three-ply collar.

It will, of course, be a surprise to many that Americans have been sending their children abroad to study music—or that they sent them anywhere to study music, even to the nearest music teacher.

If we are to believe what we hear, American musicians are in a pretty plight. Canned music, so-called, has catapulted them out of their strongholds—the concert hall and the movie. Even the orchestra pit in the theater is not what it used to be. The last refuge is the night-club, and that too is going the way of the world, with radio as the only salvation.

* * * *

VIOLINISTS are now said to be working as gardeners. First trombonists are street car conductors. Piccolo players are motormen, and solo cornetists are singing in church choirs.

It is the constant complaint that piano factories are about to shut down, or have closed, because no one studies pianoforte any more. A baby grand can now be bought, at auction for less than the cost of the case. Uprights are knocked down for the price of kindling. Concert grands are dismantled so their tops may be used as surf boards.

Yet the lady from Russia says more good music is written in America than in Europe, the continent that produced Beethoven, Wagner, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Strauss and all the others.

* * * *

IT must be so. Otherwise, no European or Asiatic, or any other continental, would begin bragging about America, a Nation that has never known an ultramodest moment—and perhaps never will. When bigger and better bragging is to be done, America will do it, as Americans have always done. We take off our hats to nobody.

That the bragging about music has been neglected must be because we are, or have been, too busy pointing out the big buildings—the highest buildings in the world—and the greatest cities, with the largest populations on earth—New York, Chicago, and old Sleepy-town itself, Philadelphia. To think there have been composers living in these towns all the while, turning out classics!

Now that we are the greatest music masters in the world, let's all get together and strike up the band! Music hath power to soothe the savage breast, and the right kind of music might even influence the stock market.

FINANCE COMMITTEE SENDS TAX MEASURE TO SENATE

of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, reported the new tax bill to the Senate. It was the bill the chameleon committee had last approved, although there were further efforts at the committee session to change vital provisions of the measure.

Amusement Tax Fought.

Senator Samuel Shortridge (Republican), of California, led one of the unsuccessful sorties on the bill. He didn't like the committee's acceptance of the admission tax proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills. A 10 per cent tax on amusement admissions of 10 cents and over, Senator Shortridge decided, was much too much and he had the entire California moving picture business to back him up. But his effort was lost by a vote of twelve to six.

Senator Shortridge, however, was not the only member of the committee who attempted to have reopened provisions which Secretary Mills had lashed the committee into accepting at its final session last week.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, and Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, launched efforts to have the taxes on high incomes increased, but they were defeated. Senator Connally, incidentally, has had a powerful hand in committee action on the bill and at one time last week there were references to the bill as the "Connally bill."

Early Action Predicted.

The advertised "agreement" of the committee on the Mills "compromise" plan was good just as long as the committee wasn't in session. When the committee met there was another war. Some members of the committee apparently thought the tax bill had been agreed to and it was necessary to send out scouts to round them up to vote to report the bill 12 to 6.

Senator Smoot was said by some senators to have damned the bill with sufficiently faint praise when he said that it was "the best bill we could get." Obviously the committee chairman didn't want to praise the bill as his idea of a proper tax measure. In his reluctance he was not alone. Other committee members have made known their purpose to fight certain provisions on the floor of the Senate.

It is this very disagreement over individual items which gives authenticity to the prediction of party leaders that the bill will be whipped through the Senate in ten days or two weeks. The disagreement among committee members is illustrative of the disagreement among the Senate generally. The written report of the committee is to be submitted today and the bill is to be taken up for consideration on the floor of the Senate Thursday.

There are to be numerous attacks. Senator David Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, are determined to seek to substitute the general manufacturers' sales tax for various special taxes in the committee bill. They have bolstered their determination with assurances from various members of the House that they would vote for a general sales tax of 1 or 1¼ per cent although they voted against the 2¼ per cent general sales tax proposed by the ways and means committee.

Sales tax advocates are energetically active and are refusing to admit defeat. Undoubtedly the sales tax will be brought to a vote in the Senate. But even if approved there, which is not especially likely, it will not be accepted by the House if the opinion of Democratic and Republican leaders there is to be taken as indicating what the rank and file have told them.

The tariff provisions of the bill are to afford another battlefield. Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, ranking minority member of the finance committee, is reported to have told influential Mississippi interests that he would resign rather than vote to include tariffs in the tax bill. The impropriety of such inclusion, as viewed by Senator Harrison, is certain to take up a good part of the Senate's days.

Hull Also Tariff Foe.

Senator Cordell Hull (Democrat), of Tennessee, who came over to the Senate from the House not so long ago and, consequently, sits far down on the minority side of the finance committee table, is going to be heard from, too. Senator Hull probably is the most quiet appearing man in the Senate, but he also is one of the steadily dwindling group of whom it is said that he could write a tax or tariff bill which would be logical if locked alone in a room. He is going to attack the tariff provisions in the tax bill.

As reported to the Senate yesterday the tax bill is a measure which no member or group of members of the finance committee will support as a good bill. It will be considered in a welter of conflicting opinions. If the hope of leaders is borne out and it is passed within ten days or two weeks it will be largely because senators believe they will have a greater chance of wreaking their improvement on it in conference than on the floor of the Senate. Prospect of passage of the tax bill before the end of the month can not be based on an agreement on the worth of the bill, but on a desire to get rid of a potato too hot to be held comfortably.

tunity to "iron out" Senate differences.

"This bill would saddle $500,000 a year on the people of the District," Representative Blanton said. "I have received a big box of letters from District citizens since April 25, telling me: 'For God's sake, don't let them pass that bill. We did not know there was such a bill in Congress.'"

The Texas representative was chided by Mrs. Norton for "using up so much of the District's time." She said he would have it appear that "he was the only member of the House who was honest about the merger."

Others Defend Merger.

Among those who took the floor in defense of the consolidation were Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York; Representative Pehr G. Holmes (Republican), Massachusetts, and Representative Carl R. Chindblom (Republican), Illinois.

Much of the discussion centered about the so-called "power clause," under which the new company can continue in effect contracts under which the Washington Railway & Electric Co. buys power at cost from the Potomac Electric Power Co. and retails it to other companies.

Representative Holmes argued that the volume output made possible by these contracts permits the Potomac Electric Power Co. to sell current to District residents at reduced prices. Mr. Blanton's argument was that profits under the contracts should be used to reduce rates charged consumers of current.

Representative Chindblom took exception to a letter from the Federation of Citizens Associations, read by Mr. Blanton. He said the letter did not speak for the Federation, but for a group that had been fighting the Public Utilities Commission.

Blanton Attacks Pipe Line.

Representative Blanton also fought passage of the bill authorizing the Gulf Refining Co. to lay petroleum pipe lines. Alleging that the Gulf Co., with the Royal Dutch Shell, has been importing cheap oil from South America and "making paupers out of American independents."

"This bill would give this big monopoly an extra monopolistic right on the very streets of the Nation's Capitol," he said.

Much of the afternoon was consumed in debate on the Bowman bill for regulation of securities in the District, which did not reach a vote. Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, launched a violent attack on the measure. He declared it resembled a bill introduced at the last Congress designed to protect certain individuals who wanted to defraud the public."

The bill would require securities salesmen to register with the Superintendent of Insurance, who could deny a license to persons convicted of fraud. Representative Patman favored amending the criminal code to reach offenders directly. He said the Bowman bill "gives too much authority to one person."

PRESIDENT VETOES HOSPITALIZATION ACT

(Associated Press.)

With an eye to economy, President Hoover wielded his veto power for the fourth time this session yesterday and sent back to the House unsigned the Welch civilian hospitalization bill.

The President contended the measure, which would provide hospital treatment and the privileges of soldiers' homes for civilians serving on transports in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, and the Boxer rebellion, would "ultimately involve the Government in hundreds of millions of expenditures."

In a message telling of his action, which was read to a quiet House on the motion of Representative Gasque (Democrat), South Carolina, the Chief Executive said:

"Nothing has transpired since that date (February 23, 1931) which would justify me now in approving this bill.

"Would Favor One Class."

"I can not concur in a proposal to single out one class of civilian employes who served during certain hostilities and confer upon them the right to the benefit of hospitalization and domiciliary care provided by law for veterans of our wars."

Representative Welch (Republican), of California, author of the bill, sought to forestall the veto several days ago. He went to the White House on the ground that Mr. Hoover was under a "misapprehension" concerning his measure.

Welch asserted not more than a score of men would be eligible for the benefits named, and that the cost to the Government would be small. The President, however, did not agree.

The Chief Executive asserted yesterday "Our first obligation" is to veterans who had served in the Army or Navy.

Sees Possible Precedent.

"We should certainly not now," he said, "reduce the availability of the hospital and home facilities which have been provided for them by throwing such facilities open to civilians.

"Such a proposal would be establishing a precedent which, in all justice, would call for similar legislation in behalf of other civilians. It would ultimately involve the Government in hundreds of millions of expenditures by the usual accretions of wider spread inclusions of new and borderline groups."

After the House had listened to the veto message it was agreed to send the bill back to the pensions committee. None of the measures vetoed by the President during the present session have been returned to the White House over his objection. His first two vetoes were on comparatively minor private relief bills, but he recently sent back unsigned a major pensions bill.

British Naval Commander Relieved.

Bermuda, May 9 (A.P.).—Admiral Reginald A. R. Plunkett-Ernle-Erle-Drax, arrived here today to relieve Vice Admiral Sir Vernon Haggard as commander of the America and West Indies British fleet. He was extended an official welcome.

Hoover's Veto Mesasge On New Hospitalization

The President's veto message on the bill for civilian hospitalization to the House follows in full:

I am returning without approval H. R. 4724, entitled "An act to confer to certain persons who served in the quartermaster corps or under the jurisdiction of the quartermaster general during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection, or the China relief expedition the benefits of hospitalization and the privileges of the soldiers' homes."

This bill is identical with H. R. 6997, Seventy-first Congress, third session, from which I withheld approval for the reasons set forth in my message to the House of Representatives, of February 23, 1931, printed as House Document No. 778. Nothing has transpired since that date which would justify me in now approving this bill.

I can not concur in a proposal to single out one class of civilian employes who served during certain periods of hostilities and confer upon them a right to the benefit of hospitalization and domiciliary care provided by law for veterans of our wars.

Such proposal would be establishing a precedent which, in all justice, would call for similar legislation in behalf of other civilians.

It would ultimately involve the Government in hundreds of millions of expenditures by the usual accretions of wider spread inclusions of new and borderland groups.

I am not unmindful of the value of the service rendered by these civilian components, but I do not feel that they should be made beneficiaries of the laws which have been enacted to care for our veterans—those who served under enlistments, enrollments or commissions in the Army and Navy.

Our first obligation is to these veterans and we should certainly not now reduce the availability of the hospital and home facilities which have been provided for them by throwing such facilities open to civilians.

AKRON SEEKS HELP FOR TEXAS LANDING

Akron followed the gulf coast of Louisiana and passed into Texas, reaching Beaumont shortly after 1 p. m. She swung south to Port Arthur and still following the coast made Galveston at 3:05 p. m.

Unless speed is picked up, she will not reach El Paso before early tomorrow.

In an airy message radioed to the Navy Department, Lieut. Comdr. Rosenthal told of a tournament for the "Acey-Deucey" championship of "Texas at 2,000 feet."

The message, as decoded by the Navy, explained the game as "a species of backgammon very popular in naval circles."

San Francisco, May 9 (A.P.).—The naval radio station here announced tonight a radio message from the dirigible Akron stated the probable time of mooring at the Sunnyvale base was now set for "sunrise Wednesday, May 11."

House Pays Respects To Memory of Doumer

(Associated Press.)

HERRIOT LOOMS AS LIBERAL IN SETTLING WORLD ISSUES

policy of the French government will assume a more conciliatory aspect toward international problems, but no great or sudden departure from the Tardieu tactics is expected. The liberalism of the Herriot government will be demonstrated more in internal than in foreign policy.

The first problem which will fall to the new Herriot government is the maintenance of the French disarmament program at the general conference, now temporarily in recess. The recess is expected to continue until May 23. Some reports were current yesterday that the conference would be postponed until after the meeting of the reparations experts at Lausanne in June. No confirmation of this report could be gleaned at the State Department.

However, the adjustment of disarmament depends to a certain extent upon the settlement of the reparations question. Reports from Basel that the delegates to the Lausanne conference would extend the Hoover moratorium for two years insofar as reparations payments were concerned, were discounted here as trial balloons.

Payments From Europe.

Payment of the debts by France, England and the other European debtors of the United States is expected on the next due date, which will be December 15, and until that time no further action by this Government will be required.

The announcement by German Chancellor Bruening that Germany would default on her next reparations payments was expected here. Considerable speculation exists as to the action which M. Herriot will take, if he is premier and the German Versailles payments are not forthcoming at the next due date.

If the allied powers are able to assemble at Lausanne and accord Germany any alleviation of her debts, as for example some concession on the conditional annuities, it is believed that this action would go far in demonstrating their ability to "put their own house in order" as a necessary preliminary to any reconsideration of the problem of what Europe owes the United States.

Aid From Herriot.

The most that can be expected in the way of concessions from a Herriot government is a willingness to adopt suggestions that would bring the conference nearer agreement. Heretofore the French thesis exposed by Premier Tardieu and obediently corroborated by French military allies—Poland, Roumania, Czechoslovakia, and Jugoslavia—has been at complete variance with the other disarmament proposals that have been put forward by the other delegations.

The kernel of the French thesis has been an international police force under the League of Nations to insure French security.

It is believed interesting here that one of the French political platforms adopted by a wing of the Socialists has reversed the historic trinity of "security, arbitration and disarmament" by placing "disarmament" before either of the other two considerations.

If this same tendency is carried out by the Herriot government, it will enable the Geneva negotiations to proceed much faster and perhaps result in a general naval agreement between France and Italy on the basis of the London treaty.

M. Herriot himself has visited the United States, and in 1920 made a trip throughout most of the important cities of the country while he was still mayor of Lyons. In some of his recent speeches he has criticized the attitude of the United States as interference when American participation was not wanted, and then abstaining when it was needed. As chief of the Left Cartel group during the debacle of the franc, he was held to be responsible for the falsification of the figures in the Bank of France's weekly statement of franc notes in circulation. Subsequently he was exonerated from all complicity in this maneuver, and has been the energetic leader of the Radical Socialists in the Chamber of Deputies since then. His pipe is as familiar to French cartoonists as the briar of Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes.

HOPES OF COORDINATED STEP TO ECONOMY ACTION RISING

$500,000,000. The resolution urged the principle of reducing wages rather than discharging workers.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, asked the Senate appropriations committee to shave 10 per cent from the aggregate of all appropriations bills rather than applying the percentage reduction rigidly to each bill. His resolution was referred to the appropriations committee.

Appropriations Chairman Jones met with his independent offices subcommittee to begin marking the independent offices supply bill. This measure will be reported to the Senate without the McKellar 10 per cent cut to test out Senate sentiment on the McKellar program.

House and Senate conferees on the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor appropriations bill, already cut 10 per cent under House totals, planned to meet today to iron out differences. Expectation was that the House will accept virtually all of the Senate reductions.

House Expenditures Chairman John J. Cochran called a meeting of his committee today with a view to reviewing the field of possible economies through consolidations or elimination of Government bureaus.

McKellar Plan Scored.

The Oddie proposal to rescind Senate action ordering 10 per cent cuts in Postoffice-Treasury supplies drew the criticism of Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, proponent of the 10 per cent slashes. Senator McKellar called Senator Oddie to task for introducing the resolution on his own initiative without consulting the Postoffice-Treasury subcommittee, of which he is chairman.

Senator Oddie said it would be inhuman to throw out of work the thousands of employes required if the McKellar cut is applied, and for this reason he had not called a meeting of the subcommittee.

In the discussion that followed, Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, called the Oddie resolution an "astounding proposal;" while Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, said the action proposed might lay the Senate open to a charge of not cooperating with the White House. Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, said much of the saving achieved to date had been merely a "postponement of appropriations." In a statement off the floor he said he was weary of partisan recriminations, and did not care who got the credit if real economies were effected.

Watson Gives Approval.

Advancing the subcommittee plan of achieving new economies, Senator Robinson said:

"I am wondering if an arrangement couldn't be effected to set up a subcommittee of the appropriations committee with authority to deal with the entire problem. It is my thought that such a committee as I have suggested might find it necessary to recommend legislation to facilitate economies which it thinks sound."

Senator Watson responded immediately:

"If a subcommittee of the appropriations committee of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans be appointed to deal with the economy questions in a nonpartisan way and then report to the Senate, I believe it would be the best way. I heartily concur in the suggestion made by the senator from Arkansas."

IDLE REVOLT HINTED OVER LACK OF FOOD

A. F. of L. Spokesman Tells Senate Unit of Unrest and Need for Aid.

(Associated Press.)

A warning of possible revolt unless the Federal Government moves to prevent unemployment distress came from organized labor yesterday as a new drive was launched for Federal jobless relief.

The possibility of revolt was voiced by Edward F. McGrady, spokesman for the American Federation of Labor, before the Senate manufactures committee. Hearings were opened on the Costigan bill to provide $500,000,000 for advances to States and municipalities through a bond issue.

Previously a series of social workers from New York, Chicago and Philadelphia had testified local relief efforts were failing and appealed for Federal help.

Meanwhile the movement for Federal aid was apparently gaining ground in the Senate, particularly among the Democrats. Sponsors of the movement were talking more optimistically than at any previous time this session.

Democratic Conference Looms.

There was some discussion of calling a Democratic conference to consider the many proposals offered.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, introduced a bill calling for immediate appropriation of $100,000,000 for relief of the jobless to be distributed by the President.

Mr. McGrady startled the committee with his frank warning.

"If something is not done and starvation is going to continue and perhaps increase," he said, "the doors to revolution are going to be thrown wide open and leaders of the country ought to know it.

"The administration ought to know that more than balancing the budget is needed. Bread and butter are needed. We want to get it through work; but if we can't do that, we are going to get it anyway."

Many of the social workers who testified were among those who appeared in support of Federal aid several months ago, but there was one new witness, C. C. Carstens, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America, who said he had been opposed to Federal relief, but now favors it.

National Survey Quoted.

A Nation-wide survey of conditions was presented by H. L. Lurie, chairman of the unemployment subcommittee of the American Association of Social Workers, which he said showed relief funds are "being spread thinner and thinner." He said:

"Relief has been continuously and gradually reduced so that whole families are getting an average of $2.39 a week."

Prentice Murphy, of the Philadelphia Children's Bureau, said, "We can not anticiptae the next winter without sinking hearts."

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said last night: "I believe before the session is concluded we must get together and work out some plan of Federal relief. I would like to see the establishment of a self-sustaining constructive program. I would like to see well-protected relief extended to the States upon their requests."

U. S. Workers Campaign On Retirement Program

Federal employes yesterday launched a drive against the arbitrary retirement provision of the House economy bill.

The burden of the employes' rebellion against the legislation was placed before Senator Porter H. Dale (Republican), of Vermont, chairman of the Senate civil service committee, yesterday.

Pleading for a sane consideration of personnel problems, the employes presented data compiled at the direction of Luther C. Steward and Miss Gertrude McNally, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

The Government will not save money by arbitrarily retiring employes who have reached 70 years of age, Senator Dale was told.

Ulrey J. Biller, retirement expert of the National Federation of Federal Employes, headed the committee which waited on Senator Dale and presented the figures compiled for the investigation. Other members of the committee included Fickens Neagle, of the Navy Department; William L. Soleau, Labor Department; Miss Caroline I. Griesheimer, Civil Service Commission; Dr. A. D. Wilkinson, pension service, Veterans' Administartion, and W. L. Turner, Department of Commerce.

Industrialists Are Accused of Seeking to Undermine Federal Functions.

Charges that efforts of industrialists toward reduction in Federal appropriations and salaries are not aimed primarily at economy but are intended to undermine a function of government were made last night at the meeting of the Federal Bar Association by R. E. Marsh, head of the Professional Employes Association of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Marsh quoted publications which, he said, misrepresented the budget deficit of $2,500,000,000 as due to the administrative cost of government, whereas, he said, the actual cost of government, less expenditures for the Army and Navy and for public improvements, is less than $500,000,000. He also quoted the statement of a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce which favored the outright abolition of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission.

Lloyd Garrison, special assistant to the Attorney General, who headed the investigation of bankruptcy law administration, described the amendments to the present laws which are included in legislation now before Congress. The association went on record favoring the changes in principle.

William R. Vallance was reelected president of the association. Other officers named were Charles P. Sisson, first vice president William A. Roberts, second vice president; Clarence M. Charest, third vice president; Kenneth H. Bruner, treasurer; Ralph G. Cornell, secretary, and William O. Burtner, financial secretary.

A resolution was adopted which authorized a committee to investigate the feasibility of the association outlining a code of ethics for Federal employes both while in and after leaving the Government service. The committee was also privileged to study the codes of ethics of persons not members of the bar, who practice before Federal boards and commissions.

In 1893 he outfitted a navy for Brazil, and at varous times, although an American citizen, was consul in this country for the governments of Chile, Nicaragua and Costa Rica. He purchased a cruiser from Chile in 1895 and then sold it to Japan, and in 1904 he purchased 20 submarines and torpedo boats for Russia, then at war with Japan.

M'ARTHUR STRIKES AT ARMY CUT PLAN

(United Press.)

The chief of staff of the Army, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, stuck boldly yesterday at the proposal to reduce the Army's officers by 2,000, holding it to be a serious menace to national defense. The reduction is provided in the Army appropriation bill.

In a letter to Representative Snell (Republican), New York, MacArthur, "as the military advisor to the Government," presented the considered views of the Army general staff. He asked Snell to lay them before Congress.

The fighting general, who used to wander about the trenches in France armed only with a riding-quirt, displayed his old-time fire and vigor in attacking the proposed reduction. He pointed out that the United States Army already ranks sixteenth among the fighting forces of the world, and added:

"Further reductions would bring us close to prostration—a condition not conducive to the promotion of a feeling of security at home nor to enhancing the respect with which our pacific counsels are received abroad."

MacArthur explained that the War Department had not been aware, during its hearings before the military subcommittee on appropriations, that Congress planned to cut the Army's 12,000 officers by 2,000. Hence, he said, the War Department had no opportunity to present its views on "such a revolutionary step."

The burden of MacArthur's argument was that the United States, having no large conscript army, depended on a well-trained corps of officers to whip a civilian force into a fighting trim in an emergency.

CRUDE BOMB FIRES CONSULATE OF U. S.

Explosive Hurled From Auto Does Little Damage to Nagasaki Office.

(Associated Press.)

A crude bomb believed to have been hurled from a passing automobile yesterday set fire to the American consulate at Nagasaki.

Henry B. Hitchcock, the American consul, reported to the State Department that the fire was quickly put out with extinguishers and garden hose and that Japanese police are investigating.

No political significance was attached to the incident by Consul Hitchcock in his report.

The American consulate at Nagasaki is a massive, two-story brick building overlooking the water front on the east side of Nagasaki harbor. It is owned by the United States Government and is a combination office and residence in which Mr. Hitchcock and his wife make their home.

The building has a broad veranda extending across the front on both the lower and upper floors and is separated from the street by a high masonry wall.

Served in Japan 20 Years.

Mr. Hitchcock is a Connecticut man and Yale graduate, who has been in the American foreign service in Japan for twenty years, having been stationed at Tokyo, Taihoku and Kobe before assuming his present post.

Glen W. Bruner, who is vice consul at Nagasaki, is a native of Nebraska, who was educated at Colorado Agriculture College and Northwestern University. Mr. Bruner served with the American Army in France from 1917 to 1919. He first went to Japan in educational work and has been vice consul at Nagasaki since November of last year.

Shanghai, May 9 (A.P.).—A threat to assassinate Japanese officials in China by bombings such as that which occurred last month in Hongkew Park came out of the local Korean colony today.

A man named Kim Koo signed a statement in which he described himself as the head of the Korean Patriots Society and said he was the instigator of the Hongkew bombing.

Bomber Achieved Purpose.

On that day, said the statement, he sent Yun Kil, a young Korean revolutionary, into Hongkew with bombs and Yun "achieved his purpose." The young man now is in the hands of the Japanese, said Kim, and may be dead or alive.

"My life is dedicated to freeing my country," Kim's statement said. "The Japanese are doing everything in their power to apprehend me, but my work continues. Our association seeks to kill Japanese civil and military leaders. There will be other affairs similar to that at Hongkew soon, both in Japan and Manchuria."

Japanese troops have begun to withdraw toward the International Settlement as stipulated by the armistice signed last week. Today they left Liuho, Kating and Nanziang. Tomorrow they will evacuate Lotien. As they move back Chinese police take over the territory.

ADELE ASTAIRE WED TO LORD CAVENDISH

She Obeys Her Own Rule in Marrying Man Three Years Her Junior.

Bakerwell, Derbyshire, England, May 9 (A.P.).—Adele Astaire, who danced her way to eminence in theaters on both sides of the Atlantic, was married today to Lord Charles Cavendish in the private chapel of Chatsworth House, the ancestral home of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, parents of the bridegroom.

Miss Astaire, who is 31 years old, said shortly after her engagement had been announced last year that a girl always should marry a man younger than herself. She obeyed this rule. Her husband is three years her junior.

Choristers in white surplices sang "O Perfect Love" at the ceremony—the first marriage ever performed in the historic little sanctuary on an upper floor of the great house.

The duke and the duchess, the Marchioness of Hartington and the bridegroom's sisters with their husbands, were present.

"To retain their independence and their individuality, women should never tie themselves up to husbands older than themselves," Miss Astaire averred when she promulgated her rule for marriage.

After their wedding breakfast, the duke's son and his bride left by motor for London on their way to the continent. It was believed their first stop would be Paris.

BODY IS RECOVERED; BELIEVED GROCER'S

E. T. Drury, Who Disappeared From Steamer, Tentatively Identified.

Baltimore, May 9 (A.P.).—A body, believed to be that of E. T. Drury, a retired grocer, who disappeared April 3 while aboard a steamer bound from Baltimore to Norfolk, was found today on Cedar Point shore, near Solomons, St. Marys County, by Capt. Major Todd, a Crisfield fisherman.

The body was described as that of a man about 70 years old, with smooth face, dressed in blue serge trousers, silk stockings and underwear. There was a wound on the top of the man's head and $71.72 was found in his pockets.

Tentative identification was made by C. M. Zepp, a Baltimore salesman, who at one time was employed by the grocer.

An inquest was held by Magistrate Harry P. Wise of Pearson, St. Marys County, and the cause of the death was announced as "unknown."

Drury, who was 76, sailed from Baltimore April 3 on the City of Norfolk for Norfolk. His stateroom was empty when the boat docked and officers found a note addressed to a son-in-law, George F. Huebeck, of Baltimore.

He had lost his wife a short time before and was described by his friends as being "nervous and depressed."

Upper and lower plates found in the mouth of the dead man will be examined tomorrow by Dr. Ernest H. Hinrichs, Baltimore dentist, who treated the grocer.

BUSINESS HOPEFUL TAX BILL WILL BE ENACTED BY JUNE 1

pronounced sentiment recently that the underground roots of some slight business recovery are well advanced and that the merest evidence of a genuine will-to-do in Congress would release these dammed-up forces to make at least the normal spring expansion in retail trade, which thus far has failed to materialize, notwithstanding that it usually begins with the Easter buying.

Several Government officials, who are constantly in close touch with banking and finance, have been waiting patiently for five weeks for the new Federal Reserve policy in bond purchases to reflect itself in easier commiercial credits. None of these officials wishes to take the position that the disorganization in Congress in relation to the Federal fiscal program is solely responsible for the continued timidity of bankers and business men in general; but none, on the other hand, doubts that the business uncertainties engendered recently on Capitol Hill have been a dominant, if not at times a controlling, factor in all market sentiment.

Insurgents Still at Work.

The only disquieting note in yesterday's news concerning Federal finances was a report on Capitol Hill that the insurgent forces in the House which wrecked both the tax and economy bills in that chamber in March and April are now at work in search for some new "issue" with which to block the nonpartisan budget-balancing program which comes over from the Senate.

As tentatively outlined yesterday in informal conversations between the young laguardia, the next wrecking plan will center upon an effort to revive the gigantic Federal bond issue for public works and a dole to the various city and county unemployment relief funds.

Revival of these proposals in connection with the tax and economy bills is vigorously advocated by some of those who led in the destruction of these bills previously, but they have met with a cool reception thus far, even at the hands of those who were eager to join the earlier revolts against the Democratic leadership.

Message Lends Sobering Touch.

The overwhelming reaction from the country Friday and Saturday to President Hoover's denunciation of the disastrous congressional effort to put the national finances in order has given pause to scores of House members who heretofore have looked upon the budget program as a mere routine matter. This sobering of the more irresponsible congressmen has inspired the hope that the new nonpartisan program will be accepted quickly by both houses.

Some officials downtown feel that the vital budget bills could be enacted within ten days if the House and Senate desired to make a quick ending of the distressing fiscal uncertainty hanging over business. They point out that bills of far greater moment were passed in war times within a week.

But even allowing for a fair amount of the apparently inevitable political horseplay, these officials believe, the joint program for reducing expenses and raising new revenues almost certinly will be out of the way by June 1.

Buying of Bonds Continues.

Yesterday's combined statement of member banks' condition as of May 4 was distinctly disappointing to some members of the Federal Reserve Board, particularly in that it showed a further decline of $40,000,000 in loans outstanding, as compared with the week of April 27.

In the face of these figures, however, these same officials stoutly maintain that the Federal Reserve's open market purchases of Government bonds, which has been taking up about $100,000,000 worth of securities a week for more than a month, is building up a tremendous reservoir of available funds against the return of national confidence in the budget situation.

It is remarked, for example, that the reserves of all New York banks now aggregate approximately 20 per cent above the normal requirements. As soon as the political horizon clears sufficiently to make possible some fairly definite calculation as to the future, these vast sums will be available, potentially at least, for normal credit needs of business.

Only this series of facts and figures leads Federal Reserve officials to their conclusions that all business is waiting on Congress.

Bill Raises Passport Fee to $9.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill increasing to $9 the fee for a passport and limiting the validity of a passport or visa to two years.

U. S. INVESTIGATING BABY BUYING EFFORT

(Associated Press.)

A fantastic tale of an attempt to buy a North Carolina baby resembling the Lindbergh infant was investigated yesterday by officials preparing for a prompt trial of Gaston B. Means if he is indicted for embezzling $100,000 given him to effect the return of the kidnaped boy.

In Concord, N. C., last night, however, Mrs. Fannie Hill and Joe P. Fisher said it was they who stopped at the camp home yesterday and suggested he should charge admission to see the child because of its resemblance to the Linbergh baby. They denied offering to buy the baby.

Means, former convict and once a spectacular Government detective, was jailed last week on a charge of larceny after trust of $100,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean, wife of The Washington Post's publisher.

The prosecutor confidently expects the District of Columbia grand jury will indict him on this charge and also for embezzlement on two counts. Mrs. McLean says she gave Means $100,000 last March, and later $4,000. He is charged with having appropriated all of this for himself after promising to use it to obtain the return of the Lindbergh baby. The grand jury's action will be announced today.

Officials were not ready to link the North Carolina incident with Means. The Justice Department, however, turned the information over to investigators who are seeking the $100,000 in Means' old home in Concord, N. C.

The Camps reported to local authorities that the strangers offered various sums up to $50,000 for the baby. He is said to resemble the Lindbergh child.

Advisors of Mrs. McLean said that the story fitted in with what they believed—before they went to the authorities—would be the denouement of the weird negotiations. Means often promised Mrs. McLean, it was said, to bring the Lindbergh baby to her. When she and her advisors realized they were being duped, they added, they feared Means would present some baby as the Lindbergh child. Instead, they say, he finally said he had given the money to a man he believed was Mrs. McLean's representative.

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover said yesterday he would ask for arraignment of Means on Friday if he is indicted.

"We're prepared to go to trial any time they are," he added, referring to the defense.

Means' lawyer probably will seek time—should he be arraigned Friday—in which to prepare a plea. Means answered "not guilty" when he was charged with larceny by a United States commissioner. Attorney Rover will seek to have the trial set soon after arraignment.

Deadline Reached; Curtis Is Missing

New Course in Search for Lindbergh Baby Points on Plane Trip.

Norfolk, Va., May 9 (A.P.).—A pivot point in the Lindbergh negotiations, with a new course of procedure believed to be dependent on a supposed plane trip to reestablish contack with kidnapers, had apparently been reached tonight as a reported deadline came in the efforts of three Norfolk intermediaries to recover the famous baby.

As the reported final day set for continuing the negotiations drew to a close tonight, a blank silence concealed the activities of John Hughes Curtis, principal negotiator, who is believed to have left the naval base here since Friday night by plane. Lieut. George L. Richard, naval officer assisting the Norfolk boat builder, is thought to have piloted Curtis, and possibly Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, on the trip.

In the meantime the discovery of a note referring to the Lindbergh baby started an intensive search of buildings on Broad street in Elizabeth City, N. C., Norfolk police reported the finding of the note today to officers of the North Carolina city. The note, found in a bottle washed ashore on North River, in Eastern North Carolina, was printed with a pencil. It read:

"We are afraid to return the Lindbergh baby. It is on Broad street, Elizabeth City, N. C."

Man With Indigestion Seeks Boxcar of Soda

Kansas City, May 9 (A.P.).—Clifford Ferris, 22, was arrested today while tampering with the seal on the door of a boxcar full of bicarbonate of soda.

Ferris wasn't intending to steal anything, he told officers. It was an attack of indigestion which urged him to break into the car.

KELLEY SPURS TRIAL PLAN FOR 4 YOUTHS

Honolulu Prosecutor Will Go Ahead, Despite Departure of Mrs. Massie.

Honolulu, May 9 (A.P.).—Although the complaining witness sailed yesterday for the mainland, Prosecutor John C. Kelley declared today the trial of four youths charged with assaulting Thalia Massie will start as scheduled May 25.

And if Mrs. Massie is not in Circuit Judge A. M. Cristy's court by 9 a. m. that day, Kelley said, he will request a warrant for her arrest.

But since he can not enforce such a warrant beyond the jurisdiction of the court—which does not extend to the mainland—Kelley went on to explain that the trial would proceed whether Mrs. Masie is here or not.

The city and county prosecutor, who recently prosecuted Mrs. Massie's mother, Mrs. Granville Fortescue; her husband, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and two Navy enlisted men, for second degree murder, and won a verdict of manslaughter, said he understood a subpena calling for Mrs. Massie's appearance in the court against the alleged ravishers had been served on her before her ship sailed for San Francisco.

Scene Aboard Malolo.

Lono McCallum, one of the policemen sent to the boat with the subpena, was to report to Kelley on the service. Kelley said he had instructed McCallum not to use force.

"We want to avoid any further rows with the Navy," he explained.

This was interpreted as a reference to yesterday's scene aboard the liner Malolo when Dewey Mookini, Hawaiian policeman, charged Capt. Ward K. Wortman, commander of the naval submarine base at Pearl Harbor, with "assaulting" him when he tried to serve Mrs. Massie the subpena. Spectators said Capt. Wortman pushed the policeman out of the way while Mrs. Massie ran past and made for her stateroom.

Interviewers sought out the naval officer today and asked him about the "confusion" aboard the ship.

"There wasn't any confusion," snapped Capt. Wortman. "It was so crowded in the corridor I couldn't help bumping into Mookini."

Capt. Wortman was Lieut. Massie's superior officer at Pearl Harbor in the months before the junior officer was taken into custody, along with his mother-in-law, and the two enlisted men, A. O. Jones and E. J. Lord, for lynching Joe Kahahawai, the Hawaiian Mrs. Massie said broke her jaw in last September's assault.

Business Leaders Act.

With the departure of the Massie-Fortescue party there appeared in the city a definite effort by business leaders to end the public excitement which reached a climax with the conviction of Kahahawai's killers and commutation of their 10-year sentences by the governor to one hour each in the custody of the Court.

Walter Dillingham, local business man, came to the defense of the Navy today and deprecated reports that the naval personnel on this island had ceased patronizing Honolulu merchants on account of the outcome of the Fortescue-Massie trial.

Prosecutor Kelley said today he was without reliable information to substantiate the San Francisco Chronicle's story that Horace Ida, one of five youths charged last September with assaulting Mrs. Massie, had confessed to a group which last December abducted and beat him.

Asked if he would offer immunity to Ida's kidnapers if they would come forward and supply him with the information contained in the Chronicle story which was vouched for by Rear Admiral William C. Cole, Kelley said such an offer would be impossible.

WIFE FOUND SLAIN, FARMER ARRESTED

Woman's Nude Body Taken From Stream as Mate Reports Vanishing.

Millersburg, Ohio, May 9 (A.P.).—Herbert Meeker, 23, tonight identified the body of a woman whose nude body was found today in a small stream here as that of his 18-year-old wife, Gertrude.

Meeker, taken from the Holmes County jail to view the bruised body at a morgue here, faltered and clasped a hankerchief to his eyes.

"Gertrude," he said, facing the casket briefly, "get up and tell them who did it!"

The young farmer remained only a short while in the morgue and then was taken back to the jail where officers planned to question him further.

Since his arrest early this afternoon as he was preparing to plant corn on his farm near Creston, Meeker had denied any knowledge of the manner in which his girl-wife met her death.

Officers took him into custody after they had found his automobile blood-stained and partially demolished against a tree near where the body was found. They said the car appeared to have been wrecked purposely. A blood-stained white shirt was found at his home, also officers said.

Meeker stuck steadfastly to his story that his wife disappeared sometime in the night and that he awoke today to find his automobile and about $8 missing.

It was disclosed tonight that Meeker and his wife had been reunited only a few hours, after a separation of about six months, when the girl was slain.

Dry Law Is Called Abuse of Power

Col. Anderson, Formerly on Wickersham Group, Hits Prohibition.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Prohibition in its present form was described tonight by Col. Henry Anderson, of Richmond, Va., a member of the President's commission on law observance and enforcement, as "an abuse of power on the part of the Government," which "in the end must prove ineffective."

His statement, made in an address before the Ohio Society in New York, came on the heels of one in which George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission, announced himself as favoring submission of the prohibition question to the people.

Col. Anderson outlined the national liquor corporation, which was a part of his suggestion for Government control as given in his individual report two years ago. Conditions disclosed in the commission report, he said, have grown steadily worse and early action to ameliorate them seems needful.

GEN. W. B. PARSONS, ENGINEER, DIES AT 73

Rites Tomorow for Builder of First Subway in New York.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Brig. Gen. William Barclay Parsons, whose engineering skill helped build huge projects the world over, died today from an illness that took him to the hospital before Easter. An operation for embolism of the lung had been performed in an effort to save the 73-year-old engineer.

Gen. Parsons, builder of the first subway in New York City, was chief engineer of the Cape Cod Canal, a member of the board of consulting engineers of the Panama Canal and chief of Engineers in the Spanish-American war.

The skill he demonstrated from 1894 to 1904 while chief engineer in charge of constructing the first subway here caused him to be chosen five years later a director of the Underground Electric Railway Co. of London as representative of American stockholders. Chicago also enlisted his services on the board of consulting engineers when it laid down a $200,000,000 subway system in 1916.

In China, he made a survey of railways in 1898 and 1899.

He served as a brigadier general of the New York National Guard in the Spanish American War and reentered the service as a major in the World War. He rose through successive grades to a colonel in command of the Eleventh U. S. Army Engineers and saw active service near Cambrai. He personally supervised construction of the four-track railway system that carried American troops and supplies from the seaboard to the front in France.

He was decorated for his war service by the United States, France, Great Britain and Belgium. He later was commissioned brigadier general of engineers, U. S. Army Reserve.

A native of New York City, Gen. Parsons was graduated from Columbia University where in 1878 he was the stroke of the college crew in the first eight-oar open shell race in the United States.

He also received degrees from St. John's College, Maryland; Princeton University and Trinity College and at his death was chairman of Columbia's board of trustees. He had held that position since 1917, having been a member of the board since 1897. He received his civil engineering degree from Columbia in 1882.

His widow, the former Anna Dewitt Reed; a son, William Barclay Parsons, jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Weld, survive. Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at Trinity Church, of which he was a vestryman.

Full Military Honors Accorded Col. Varney

Lynchburg, Va., May 9 (A.P.).—Full military and State honors were accorded Col. Frank B. Varney, former commander of the 246th Coast Artillery and State senator from Lynchburg and Campbell County, in funeral services conducted today by the Rev. Raymond L. Markley, major in the Reserve Corps and chaplain in the American Legion.

Battery commanders served as pallbearers and a committee from the State Senate attended. The body will be sent to Arlington Cemetery, Washington, for committal services tomorrow.

Wealthy Chicago Widow Is Found Tied and Dead

Chicago, May 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, 40, who police said was a wealthy widow, was found dead in bed today, her feet tied and the body covered with bedclothing.

Her apartment, listed under the name of David Stanley, had been ransacked, leading police to suspect burglars. Mrs. S. Dore, a friend, discovered the body when she came to call. Police did not investigate the cause of death pending a coroner's autopsy. They planned to question all her acquaintances.

Saloon Tax Protest Plan Fails.

Tia Juana, Mex., May 9 (A.P.).—Because saloon keepers disagreed, today's contemplated closing of local bars in protest against a special federal tax of 1,000 pesos monthly on places dispensing hard liquors was abandoned. The city's white clad bartenders did their stuff as usual.

Two Midwest States In Primaries Today

(Associated Press.)

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Gov. George White, Ohio's favorite son, are expected to divide honors in today's presidential primaries in West Virginia and Ohio.

Far out in front of a field that will be enlarged to seven candidates this week when Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland receives that State's sixteen votes, Roosevelt was picked by State organization leaders to win West Virginia's delegation of sixteen. The New Yorker and Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma contested for the preference vote, which is not binding on the delegates.

White was assured of 46 of his State's large block of 52 to place him in the running for the first time with actual convention votes pledged to him. Only six Cleveland delegates, pledged to Peter Witt but favoring Alfred E. Smith, were in the field against the governor's full slate.

Gov. Murray was the lone candidate for Ohio's preference vote. As in West Virginia, this does not control the choice of the delegation at the national convention.

Fifty-five and nineteen delegates, respectively, were chosen in the Ohio and West Virginia Republican balloting.

President Hoover, who elected to stay off the preference lists in both States, was assured of all but four in Ohio and probably all in West Virginia. His only delegate opposition was a quartet in Ohio pledged to Joseph I. France, whom the President recently defeated in the former senator's own State of Maryland.

GEN. E. H. CROWDER BURIED IN ARLINGTON

Funeral Services for First Ambassador to Cuba Held at Walter Reed.

Maj. Gen. Enoch Herbert Crowder, noted American soldier-diplomat, was buried in Arlington Cemetery yesterday, with a group of prominent soldiers, including Secretary of War Hurley, in attendance. President Hoover was represented at the services by Col. Campbell B. Hodges, his chief military aid.

The services for the first American Ambassador to Cuba were held in Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, and were conducted by the hospital chaplain, R. Earl Boyd. The American Chamber of Commerce in Cuba was represented at the services by Judges Charles S. Lobingier, former counsel at Havana for the organization.

In addition to the Secretary of War, honorary pallbearers included Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, judge advocate general; Newton D. Baker, wartime Secretary of War; Maj. Gen. Henry P. McCain, retired; Maj. Gen. Walter C. Bethel, retired; Maj. Gen. Francis J. Kernan, retired; Brig. Gen. James A. Ryan, retired; Col. James A. Easby-Smith, Washington attorney; Col. John D. Langston, judge advocate general, Reserves; Col. Grant T. Trent, retired, and Maj. Jesse I. Miller, judge advocate general, Reserves.

Murray to Ask Income Levy on Corporations

Oklahoma City, May 9 (A.P.).—The Oklahoma income tax proposal to be initiated by Gov. W. H. Murray this year will call for a flat 10 per cent levy on net earnings of corporations.

In making this announcement today, Gov. Murray said the schedule on net incomes of individuals would be that proposed in a similar income tax bill defeated last December 18. It begins at 1 per cent with a personal exemption of $1,000 and ranges up to 10 per cent on net incomes of more than $100,000.

Former Senator's Kin Kills Self.

Chicago, May 9 (A.P.).—George B. Trumbull, 51, shot himself fatally today while neighbors looked on. Once a wealthy real estate and insurance broker, associates said he had lost heavily in real estate investments. Trumbull was a nephew of Lyman Trumbull, former United States senator from Illinois.

ROOSEVELT FORCES CLAIM ALMOST 700

Campaign Managers Reveal Basis on Which Nomination Is Expected.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign managers, still predicting his nomination on the first ballot, claimed today he will go into the Democratic national convention with close to 700 delegate-votes.

Not counting the twelve delegates picked up in Arizona and Wyoming today, the list totaled 678.

If the conventions opens with Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith in control of the votes their associates claim will be theirs, and with the other candidates getting the votes which already seem assured for them, the line-up would be like this:

708 Delegates Selected.

These figures total more than 1,154—the actual convention vote, because of overlapping claims.

Up until today's conventions in Arizona and Wyoming, 708 delegates had been selected. Of that number Roosevelt has 313 pledged, instructed or claimed.

This figure was raised automatically in political circles to 333 to Senator Huey Long's statement pointing Louisiana's 20 votes toward the Roosevelt camp. However, the Louisiana delegation is uninstructed and its choice will not be known formally until a preconvention caucus.

The Roosevelt forces also are counting on 105 of the 168 remaining in doubt—60 of Pennsylvania's 76, and 45 of the 92 New York votes in doubt.

Roosevelt Force's Claims.

There are still 434 delegates to be picked. Of that number the Roosevelt forces are counting on picking up 240.

They are not claiming the 48 Smith expects to get in Connecticut and New Jersey; the 8 in Vermont, where there is some Smith strength; the 52 in Ohio, which seemed assured for Gov. George White; Maryland's 16, which are slated for Gov. Albert C. Ritchie's column; Virginia's 24, scheduled to go to former Gov. Harry F. Byrd, and the 46 which Texas will probably give John N. Garner.

The votes they do claim are:

West Virginia, 16; Kansas, 20; New Mexico, 6; Montana, 8; South Carolina, 18; Tennessee, 24; Oregon, 10; Delaware, 6; Colorado, 12; Utah, 8; Florida, 14; Mississippi, 20; Idaho, 8; Nevada, 6; North Carolina, 26; Indiana, 30; District of Columbia, 6, and Virgin Islands, 2.

Edwin Carewe Pleads To Income Tax Charge

Los Angeles, May 9 (A.P.).—A plea of not guilty to an indictment charging him with failure to pay income taxes and attempting to evade payment for the years of 1928 and 1929 was entered today in Federal court by Edwin Carewe, motion picture director. The case will be set for trial when the term calendar is called next September.

Two other counts, involving the same charges against the director, were dismissed on motion of defense counsel, who cited a recent Supreme Court decision which determined that the Government can not prosecute income tax cases for 1926 and 1927 because of the statute of limitations.

LE BRUN PROBABLE FRENCH PRESIDENT

disarmament and war debts and reparations.

Apparently M. Tardieu decided to step down imediately, instead of waiting for the new chamber to convene in June, because he did not wish to head a repudiated government at a time when France must prepare for the important reparations conference at Lausanne in June, and must carry on at the disarmament conference now being held at Geneva.

The extent to which France's foreign policy will be affected by the chamber election probably will depend upon the action of the Socialists, who will hold a party meeting next Sunday to determine which course they will take.

Give-and-Take Policy.

The left wing of the Radical Socialists and of the Socialists has been talking about a give-and-take policy on reparations. If the Socialists collaborate with the Radicals, their past performances indicate that they might demand a scaling down of reparations and might approve the Anglo-American disarmament scheme presented at Geneva, provided the factor of security is taken care of.

On the basis of almost complete election figures, the left group will have 358 seats in the new chamber against 244 for the parties comprising the present government majority. Excluding the Communists, this will give the Left a majority of about 100 seats.

Conservatives, 5 (loss 3); Democrat-Republicans, 76 (loss 14); Ind.-Republicans, 28 (gain 2); Popular Democrats, 16 (loss 3); Left Republicans, 72 (loss 29); Independent Radicals, 62 (loss 28); Radical Socialists, 157 (gain 48); Independent and Republican Socialists, 37 (gain 5); Socialists, 129 (gain 17); Dissident Communists, 11 (gain 6); Communists, 12 (gain 2).

Poland Enters Protest After Rabbi's Execution

Warsaw, Poland, May 9 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The Polish government has requested its embassy in Moscow to place with the Soviet government an official protest against the reported execution of a rabbi, Simcha Aptovitzer.

Rabbi Aptovitzer, 34 years old, is reported to have been shot by the Soviet authorities in Tiflis. The charges against him are unknown. The rabbi was born in Galicia and fought with the Austrian forces during the World War, when he was taken prisoner by the Russians.

RITES OF COL. R. A. KLUGE

Victim of New York Pier Fire to Be Buried in Arlington.

Lieut. Col. Ralph A. Kluge, designer of the Cunard Pier, in New York, who was killed when struck on the head by the metal nozzle of a fire hose during the fire last week, which destroyed the pier, will be buried today at 1 o'clock in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

During the World War Mr. Kluge was an officer in the Army Engineers. He designed the steel construction of the pier in 1905. Last Friday, while eating in a restaurant, he heard of the fire at the pier and insisted on going to the scene. His skull was fractured when a high-pressure water hose broke, the nozzle striking him in the back of the head.

BIRTH-CONTROL RULE SOUGHT BY DOCTORS

New Orleans Session Gets Resolution to Establish Practice in Profession.

New Orleans, May 9 (A.P.).—A proposal to consider making birth control standard, legal medical practice was taken up by the American Medical Association today. The proposal was presented to the opening session of the house of delegates, official legislative body of American medicine.

So many physicians rose to discuss the subject that all action was postponed until Tuesday afternoon. Then both argument and voting will be held in an executive session, open only to physicians.

The birth control resolution was presented by J. D. Brook, M. D., of Grandville, Mich. Its text was not made public, but a gist was given to the press.

Committee Study Proposed.

He proposed appointment of a committee to spend one year studying all phases of birth control, and to recommend at the next annual meeting of the association whether its practice ought to be incorporated in recognized medicine.

Both religious and social organizations, the resolution stated, have declared in favor of birth control. It was suggested that the committee study the effects of birth control practices upon morality, health, economic prosperity of families, and upon the happiness of married couples.

Lay organizations, the resolution went on, are giving widespread advice in practical birth control, a situation which warrants looking into by the medical profession. The committee should also decide whether students in medical schools ought to be instructed thoroughly in all phases of birth control.

Direction of Control.

Finally the committee should consider whether the direction over birth control should be placed openly in the hands of the medical profession, centering possibly around the old-time principle of freedom of advice by a doctor to his patient.

The two latest developments in narcotic drug addiction were reported at the opening medical meeting this afternoon by Walter L. Treadway, M. D., assistant surgeon general of the United States. One is progress toward making a synthetic opium with all the effects except habit-forming.

The other development is increasing scientific evidence that narcotic addicts are really sick persons, who, like the insane, should be treated medically from the beginning, rather than having little done except to imprison them as criminals.

METHODIST BISHOP ASKS CHURCH UNION

Northern Session Hears Plea to Forget Old Prejudices; Racial Issue Pending.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 9 (A.P.).—Destruction of the ecclesiastical Mason and Dixon line that has existed in American Methodism since 1844 was urged today by Bishop A. J. Moore, of the Methodist Church South. He told the Methodist general conference here the time had come for a unified church knowing no "North" and no "South."

The division between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Church South has been "unfortunate," said the bishop. Without referring to the slavery question on which they split 88 years ago, he added:

"The prejudices of yesterday should be forgotten. Whatever the differences of days gone by, they are now infinitesimal and should be buried in oblivion."

Enthusiastic Reception.

The conference received the appeal with enthusiasm similar to that displayed on Saturday when it adopted an antiracial discrimination regulation which speakers said would preclude "forever" the rapprochement with the Southern church. Bishop Moore did not refer to the regulation in his address, and some delegates said they regarded the omission as encouraging the hope that the anticolor ruling would not be an obstacle in reunion negotiations.

Bishop Moore, who is Bishop of San Francisco and the general superintendent of Southern Methodism on the Pacific Coast, also brought the conference another message: "That Southern Methodism, some 3,000,000 strong, was ready again, if need be, to fight any political party encouraging the violation of the eighteenth amendment."

In his appeal for a United Methodist Church, which he said he believed to be representative of his church, Bishop Moore asserted:

"If we have done well apart, we could have done better together. The extreme urgency of the present world situation summons us to a united front. Our divisions are more than unfortunate. They are wasteful of time, energy and money."

He suggested that 1944, the centenary of the rift between the two churches, might well be designated a jubilee year to celebrate reunification. An ovation greeted his words despite rules forbidding demonstrations in the conference.

Bishop Moore also asked the Northern conference to war on industrial and social ills and to pioneer in the "recovery of the apostolic ardor" of the early Methodist Church.

The Presbyterian Church joined the Southern Methodist in fraternal greetings. The Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the hymnal revision committee of the Presbyterian Church, said he hoped eventually to see a common hymnal for both Methodist and Presbyterian Churches. The Presbyterian General Assembly, meeting in Denver later this month, would, he said, follow the dry stand of Methodism by sounding "no uncertain note on the liquor problem."

Officials Noncommittal.

The conference session marked the retirement of Bishop William F. McDowell, of Washington, senior bishop of the church; Bishop William F. Anderson, of Boston, and Bishop Charles E. Locke, of St. Paul, from active service as general superintendents.

Officials of the church remained noncommittal during discussion of the anticolor line regulation which makes it mandatory for the next quadrennial conference to be held in a city where there is no discrimination against any colored race in hotels, restaurants or other public places.

A bloc of Negro delegates, however, expressed belief that the ruling was unwise and put their race under an added handicap rather than helping it.

A decrease in the number of colleges and universities and the end of denominationalism in higher education were urged at the evening session by James B. McConaughy, president of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

"Every section of the country is now adequately supplied with colleges," he said, "and those unable to maintain their high educational standards should close their doors. An honorable death is a better fate for a college than a struggling, failing life."

Self-Navigating Craft Made To Aid Solo Undersea Trips

Inventions Exhibit Displays Everything From Needles to Locomotives; Even Bank Lock Made by Former Convict and Toothpick Filching Alarm.

New York, May 9 (U.P.).—Emil Kulik, inventor, has thought up a self-navigating device with which a single gentleman can descend to the depths of the sea and engage in the solitary pursuit of philosophy or the more energetic pursuit of sunken treasure.

The self-navigating device looks like an ugly lobster with green eyes, and is made of the same steel that goes into the armored cars with which bankers protect their treasures from the local banditti.

It has a compartment shaped like the forward cockpit of an airplane, and a short (not shirt) tail, in which the self-navigator can stow his undersea luggage or whatever muddy treasures he may find on the floor of the ocean.

It also has a couple of long, claw-like feelers, extended from the head, with which he may poke and push any obstruction he meets, and it is equipped with searchlights fore, aft, starboard and larboard, to probe the murky depths.

Inventor Kulik's device, so appealing that it will make visitors want to climb into it, shut down the cover and forget all about the depression, is only one of the startling inventions that go on view tomorrow at the International Patent Exposition at the Grand Central Palace.

Out of the 5,000 exhibits covering everything from needles to locomotives, 400 were invented by women. Some are so complicated that only one look is required to tell that a woman invented them.

Then there are the simple inventions, like nonskid soap. That was worked out by a 9-year-old girl, Kathryn Feibusch, of Brooklyn, who first tried wrapping the cake in sandpaper. Kathryn's invention will be chained down this year. Last year, when she exhibited it, somebody stole it Saturday night, and it was returned Monday, much smaller.

The patent exposition press agents call attention this year to a Scotch mousetrap in which the rodent never reaches the bait; a pinless diaper for use by bachelor uncles; a bank lock invented by a former convict; and a device that permits a restaurant customer to pick up one—only one—toothpick at a time, ringing a gong and calling the manager if he tries to snitch another.

Canadian Police Destroy Huge Still; Seize 8 Men

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 9 (A.P.).—The Royal Mounted Police today destroyed what they said was the largest illicit still ever found in Canada and which furnished 7,000 gallons of liquor daily to Midwestern United States.

Eight men, alleged to have been operating the still on a desolate island in a swamp east of Giroux, Man., were arrested. Police said the liquor was taken over the border in trucks and sold for $1 a gallon in Minnesota and North Dakota.

FRENCHMEN MOURN AT BIER OF DOUMER

Thousands Wait in Rain to View Body of Assassinated President.

Paris, May 9 (A.P.).—The gates of Elysee Palace were opened this afternoon to permit thousands of men and women who had been waiting in the rain for hours to file reverently past the black-draped bier on which rested the body of the assassinated president, Paul Doumer.

Meanwhile a careful guard was kept over Dr. Paul Gorgulov, the man who killed him, in order that he might not commit suicide. Gorgulov was watched constantly through a peephole in his prison cell.

The room in which the body of the murdered president lay in state was partly darkened, and the jeweled emblem of the Legion of Honor that he wore glowed brightly. The body was dressed in evening clothes.

The room was dimly lighted by two chandeliers, but there was light enough to show plainly the marks of the assissin's bullets.

At the request of Mme. Doumer the body will not be placed to rest in the Pantheon. Instead the president will be buried in his family vault at Vaugirard Cemetery. Other plans for the national funeral at Notre Dame Cathedral Thursday were not changed.

At police headquarters it was said the assassin probably would not be brought to trial until after an investigation that might last two or three months.

ALBERT FALL LEAVES PRISON IN AMBULANCE FOR EL PASO

by Doheny, who held a mortgage on the property.

Fall gave no statement on leaving the prison. Members of the family revealed, however, that when he was asked about an interview, he said:

"What do they want to know? If I had a good time while I was there?"

Able to Stand Trip.

Fall's family physician, Dr. Roberto Brown, made an examination of him in the prison hospital this morning and reported he was able to stand the trip to El Paso.

Members of the family said Fall had been looking forward happily to his freedom.

The ambulance in which Fall left the prison today was the one in which he was brought to the prison July 20 last year from his home in El Paso.

Fall spent most of his time while in prison in bed.

"He is about one year older (age 72) than when he came into the penitentiary, and all of the chronic diseases he has are progressive," Dr. Fiske said.

Arthritis of Spine.

"The progress these diseases have made, however, is no greater than would have been expected had Mr Fall remained in any other institution or had he been at home.

"The arthritis of the spine and resulting neuritis (in the legs) and incoordination of movement are all very little more advanced than when he came into the penitentiary."

Concerning rumors which have been current regarding the former Secretary's illness while a prisoner in the penitentiary, Dr. Fiske said:

"He had two illnesses while in Santa Fe. He had a slight cold and the other trouble was a shock suffered from a fall to the floor. His health has been excellent, however, considering his condition."

Sally Eilers and Gibson Separate Permanently

Hollywood, May 9 (A.P.).—Sally Eilers and Hoot Gibson, motion picture players, have separated permanently, as there is no hope of reconciliation, they said today. The statement was made after Gibson visited his wife at the Santa Monica home of Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels, where Miss Eilers is recuperating from an automobile accident.

"While we are very unhappy about the outcome of our marriage, we think separation is the best for our happiness," said Miss Eilers. Gibson joined her in the statement. They have not gone into the matter of divorce, but Miss Eilers intimated that this will come later.

Amateur Prospectors Seek Canadian Radium

Lincoln, Nebr., May 9 (A.P.).—Two amateur prospectors, financed by friends, are en route to the wilds of northwestern Canada today in search of radium. They are Richard H. Lovald, 29, and Lawrence W. Hewitt, 32, University of Nebraska geologists. They left by automobile for the Great Bear Lake region.

Thirty Lincoln friends added $1,000 to the prospectors' own grubstake. They expect to reach Edmonton, Alberta, about June 3 and start into the wilderness from Waterways, Alberta.

O. K. AMERICA
TUNE IN ON LUCKY STRIKE—60 modern minutes with the world's finest dance orchestras, and famous Lucky Strike news features, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening over N. B. C. networks.

Why are other cigarettes silent on this vital question?

DO you inhale? Seven out of ten people know they do. The other three inhale without realizing it. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question . . . because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Remember—more than 20,000 physicians, after Luckies had been furnished them for tests, basing their opinions on their smoking experience, stated that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

Do you inhale? Of course you do! So be careful. Safeguard your delicate membranes!

BETTER PROSPECTS.

Extraordinary efforts are being made by senators on both sides of the aisle to bring about an accord which will expedite passage of the tax and economy bills. In spite of the temptation to play politics, the Senate seems to be yielding to the public demand for action. The tax bill prepared by the committee on finance is now before the Senate, and a bipartisan plan to revise the House economy bill is being formulated.

Secretary Mills is confident that both the economy and the tax bill will become law by June 1. This optimistic opinion is an encouraging indication that much progress has been made in informal conferences, the purport of which is not yet public. No doubt Secretary Mills has become convinced that considerations of public welfare are now dominant in the minds of influential legislators of both parties, and that incidental displays of partisanship will not seriously interfere with the real work of cooperation in paring down Federal expenditures as a part of the budget-balancing process. The Senate has a most difficult task before it in shaping an economy bill which will meet the necessities of the situation and yet be acceptable to House members who thus far have placed special interests ahead of economy.

Many millions must be eliminated from Federal expenditures by the Senate if the economy plans are to do their share in balancing the budget. The House bill must be revised upward, and new economies must be added. The Senate will consider the President's plan for furloughing Federal workers instead of making a horizontal cut in all Federal pay. Included in this problem is the question of abolishing the Senate's new rule providing for an arbitrary 10 per cent cut in all appropriation bills. Under that rule tens of thousands of Federal workers are threatened with discharge, and essential services would be badly crippled, notably in the Treasury and Postoffice departments. The furlough plan and the Senate rule are in direct conflict, and one of them must give way.

The tax bill reported to the Senate yesterday embodies certain features proposed by the Treasury. The revenue to be raised by the bill is estimated at $1,030,000,000. Several attempts to reopen the bill in committee were defeated, but many amendments doubtless will be proposed on the floor. Some of the taxes provided for are vigorously opposed. This opposition lends support to the plan of Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, to revive the sales tax plan in a modified form, as a substitute for special taxes. Hope is expressed that the House will reconsider its opposition to the sales tax if a lower rate is proposed.

Danger of a tariff debate looms up because of the inclusion in the tax bill of duties upon coal, oil, copper, lumber and rubber. This mixture of tax and tariff legislation is anomalous and objectionable from several points of view, although protectionists find themselves in strong sympathy with the pleas of distressed industries suffering from undue foreign competition. But a tariff law is not merely a means of raising revenue. It is a system for the encouragement and protection of American industry, agriculture and labor. The intricate problems attaching to tariff legislation can not be solved by putting a tax on foreign commodities here and there, solely for revenue purposes. Confusion is likely to result because the interrelation of manufactures and raw materials may be disturbed by a tax which at first sight might appear to be just and necessary.

Renewed demands for Federal relief of the unemployed are forthcoming. Harrowing pictures of distress are painted, and dire predictions are made. Evidently a strong movement for Federal relief is to materialize before adjournment. The amount which would be required to make any impression upon the unemployment situation throughout the Union is so staggering that legislators shrink from tackling the question, well knowing that tax and economy bills would be futile in balancing the budget if the Treasury should be called upon to provide $500,000,000 or more for unemployment relief.

The most encouraging feature of the present difficult situation is the disposition of leaders in both parties to cooperate in behalf of national stability. The emergency calls for patriotic action, and there are many indications that the call will not be in vain.

MR. GRANDI'S VIEWS.

Upon his return from Geneva, Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy told the chamber of deputies that there were "too many words, too many resolutions in principle for the modest results obtained" at the disarmament conference. "Italy is not discouraged," he added, "but we are aware that while Geneva discusses, cannons roar in the Far East." Mr. Grandi asserted that reduction of armaments could be assured "if the smallest part of the good will so often affirmed by the nations is translated into action."

Much force is given to the last remark because of Italy's proposal to declare a universal naval holiday. This was a tangible step toward relief from the tension of armament rivalry. The proposal was not accepted by certain other powers. Mr. Grandi is therefore fully warranted in suggesting that the Geneva conference wastes its time in words while evading action.

The clean-cut proposal of the Italian government was promptly approved by the United States. Throughout the disarmament discussions Italy and the United States seem to have been in accord, actuated by the genuine desire to accomplish something definite. Foreign Minister Grandi has been frank with the public, and Americans feel that he is one European statesman whose professions are supported by readiness to act.

THE WEST COMES EAST.

Chesapeake Beach is a rather unusual locale for a Texas barbecue. Barbecues, eastern and southern style, are not a rarity in this section, but the event which the National Press Club has announced for May 21 is of the unique character that long ago made Amarillo and San Antonio famous, and then extended its sway as far westward as Los Angeles.

Barbequers of supreme genius are few and far between, and one of them is John Snider, who is en route from Amarillo to Washington to prepare the feast to be given in honor of President Timmons, the Texan who presides over the Press Club. John Snider prepared barbecues for the cattle barons in the days when that booted and sombreroed gentry ruled the West and the Southwest. The old barbecue cook is jealous of his reputation. He must personally supervise the construction of his pits, and he never leaves those pits during the 24 hours in which the beeves are cooking.

A Texas barbecue is reminiscent of the days when the Farwells of Chicago built the Texas State Capitol in exchange for the three million acres of land and started the XIT ranch; when Lord Adair of Ireland was a feudal lord in the Panhandle as well as in Ireland; or even further back, to the days of the wiry, nervous, long-limbed cattle of Spanish blood, with their slender branching horns.

Beginning in the sixties, thousands of Texas longhorns went up the Chisholm, the Old Shawnee, and the Goodnight trails. Those were the palmy days of the cattlemen. Their wealth increased at a ratio beyond their capacity to spend it. Many of them did not know how many cattle they owned. When in the latter seventies and in the early part of the decade following, their power and wealth were at the highest point, they practically owned the Lone Star State. From No Man's Land to El Paso their cattle grazed; prices were high, and money was flowing in for investment.

Texas is still the leading cattle State, and in the census taken in 1930 for the first time the Lone Star State had less than a cow per capita. For the first time since Texas was a republic, it has more people than cattle. But even in 1930 the ratio was close—5,824,715 people and 5,567,175 cattle. At the turn of the century in 1900 there were 9,428,196 cattle in Texas, compared with 3,048,710 people.

LATIN AMERICA'S TROUBLES.

Relying upon primary products for income, the republics to the South are suffering the same difficulties as those that surround American farmers. The prices of many of their raw materials have fallen as much as 40 per cent. This entails the same embarrassment in meeting fixed charges on foreign loans that American farmers encounter in paying taxes and mortgage interest.

However, added to the various economic and financial woes that have afflicted both American and Spanish-speaking agriculturists, Southern haciendados in many lands have had also to contend with disturbed political conditions and government upsets.

The situation is graphically shown in American trade figures. While imports from Latin America fell off about 50 per cent in value last year as compared with 1929, American exports to those countries declined nearly two-thirds. Trade with the Southern republics still amounts to the respectable sum of nearly $900,000,000, but only two years before both imports and exports, each separately, exceeded that sum.

The foreign indebtedness that is worrying Latin American countries on account of gold interest amounts to about $13,600,000,000. Of this amount Great Britain holds $5,722,000,000 and the United States, $5,118,000,000. Argentina is the largest borrower from the British, with a total of $2,200,000,000, and Cuba owes most to America, $1,066,000,000. Virtually no additional capital is going into Latin America at present.

Of the more than five billions of American money in the American republics only about $1,610,000,000 is in what may be termed portfolio investments, the balance being divided among communication and transportation enterprises, petroleum development, mining and smelting, and agriculture. American trade and American investment capital are both in something of a quandary as to their relations with Latin America in the immediate future. The fixed charges due from there on foreign investments amount to about $250,000,000 a year and are largely in default. Payment for merchandise shipped to various countries, even when made, cannot be transferred to the United States and the depreciated value of most currencies, rated in American gold, delays settlements. Anything like full resumption of commercial and financial relations with Latin America, it is evident, must await necessary adjustments of present heavy investments in both securities and commercial enterprises, and improvement in the economic situation throughout the world.

SALVATION VIA IOWA.

Iowa is asked once more to indorse the monarch of the farm, the foe of big business and the distributor of largess to every class with sufficient votes to warrant its consideration. In this dark hour the Government needs men—men who carry the dirt of the farm in their trouser cuffs, men who can throw dust into the eyes of Wall Street and can keep themselves untarnished by the vested interests even while in Washington. So Smith Wildman Brookhart, the only real dirt farmer in the Senate, carries his crusade for re-election back home to Iowa.

In other times the Iowan might have relied upon the keenness of his olfactory organs to justify the perpetuation to his claim upon a seat in the Senate. But now there are greater issues involved. Is not the country ensnared by millionaires and wicked manufacturers who have taken bread from the mouths of farmers? Even unconstitutional indulgences must give way to such a burning issue. Forget the sniffing of peanut politicians of yesteryear and make way for the Brookhartian Uptopia of tomorrow.

Gov. Roosevelt and less courageous leaders may hesitate in prescribing a remedy for the farmer's ills. That is because they don't have the tang of soil in their blood. Agricultural genius does not flower save in the dirt of the farm. Let those who crave salvation for the farmer turn their ears toward Iowa, where speaks the oracle of the cornfields. "Prices not lower than the cost of production for all farm products sold on the domestic market! A new revolving fund of $1,000,000,000 to finance farm exports abroad." Can any farmer tear himself away from this music to listen to the mundane drivel of unknown candidates who think Iowa has had enough of agricultural salvation?

But that is not all. The Colossus of Washington, Iowa, who was sent up to Washington, D. C., to straighten out the world, does not intend to confine his largess to the farmer. Another neglected group claims his sympathy. Let Congress distribute $2,500,000,000 from the depleted Treasury to restore the purchasing power of veterans. Presumably the only reason the senator's generosity stops there is because the plight of other groups has not reached his ears.

Did we say generosity stops? Ah, what a slip! Nothing Brookhartian ever stops. All civilization is encompassed within the realm to which his blessed quackery is extended. Even the despised business structure would not be cast out. With an unusual spurt of magnanimity the senator has agreed not to destroy big business, but to reform it. If Wall Street bows to the dictum of "agricultural progressivism" the senator may be tempted to fling a few billions in its direction, too. O, Iowa, what glories are made manifest in thy name!

PHILOSOPHY OF DESPAIR

THOMAS F. WOODLOCK, in Wall Street Journal.

If anyone is entitled to murmur, "I told you so!" it is surely Prof. Conklin, of Princeton, who sixteen years ago warned people in general that the human race had not yet attained a sufficient degree of mental capacity to manage the extremely complicated civilization that it had somehow managed to build up. What we are witnessing today the world over seems at times to be nothing more or less than a partial dissolution of that civilization.

Somebody asked the "persuasive" Mr. Keynes which of the preceding "depressions" was most completely comparable to that in which we are now plunged and how long it had lasted. He is said to have replied that it was the period known as the "dark ages" and that it had lasted 400 years!

Ferrero has a brochure entitled "La Rovina della Citta Antica" in which he traces a parallel between the centuries following the third of the Christian era and that in which we live, and the implications therein are not good reading just before bedtime.

We need not, of course, accept blindly all these intimations any more than we need yield ourselves unresistingly to the Spenglerian mood of philosophic despair—indeed we should not, even if we believed them, for it is man's business to fight however hopeless may seem the battle. Louise Imogen Guiney in her stirring poem, "The Kings," strikes the true note when she ends:

"When the terrible kings of evil
Shall darken the hill about,
Thy part is with broken saber
To rise on the last redoubt;
To fear not sensible failure
Nor covet the gain at all,
But fighting, fighting, fighting,
Die, driven against the wall."

Adieu, Premier Tardieu; Cheerio, Herriot!

A little shift to the left in the midriff of French politics doesn't mean much.

Is Geneva a bit sarcastic in conceding that what Secretary Stimson learned while there may be useful?

Chancellor Bruening is allowing the Reichstag a four-day session for a preliminary look at the budget and then it will be sent home again. How do the Germans get that way?

In attempting to apply the brake to stop Hoover, Congress evidently stepped on the accelerator.

Stocks rise on news of steel wage cuts; grains advance with reports of crop shortages; the exchanges are robots devoid of human feelings.

It will take twelve hours for the 100,000 marchers in Mayor Walker's beer parade to pass a given point. Nothing less than an I will suffice.

The radio engineers are in session. We trust they will kindly pardon any seeming lack of enthusiasm over reported perfection of amateur sets.

Burgoo King's Number 13 was not such a bugaboo after all.

Mr. Gerard resigned the treasurership of the Democratic committee. It seems Jimmy insists upon having something to do.

Republican senators with a revised economy bill and Democratic senators with a revamped sales tax will attempt to steal up on the blind side of the House.

There seems danger that the pension may become mightier than the sword.

After this session of Congress Democratic sobs at a tariff wailing wall will be a joke.

Again it is evident that it will tax the ingenuity of our best taxidermists to lead the attacks on the tacks that will puncture business.

PAUL HUDSON.

BEAUTY AND BRAINS.

"Beautiful but dumb" has been a popular catchword unsupported by any sort of scentific evidence that would prove an essential connection between the two qualities.

All in all, says the Decatur Herald, it has looked as though the linking of beauty with stupidity might be as little justified as that ancient advice to little girls that they "be good, and let who will be clever." The presumption of something antagonistic between virtue and intelligence is no credit to the wisdom of the poet who said it.

But now, at length, what do we see? In the solemn and conservative Journal of the American Medical Association appears an article setting forth the conclusion of a long series of scientific experiments, which are thought to prove that carbohydrates are the only nutritional elements that feed the brain. Muscles may be supplied with energy by the oxidation of both fat and dextrose, but for the highly specialized tissue of the brain nothing but carbohydrates will serve.

Putting this into everyday language, one must assume that a stevedore can do his stuff if he is stoked with suet, but the brain will not work unless it has sugar or starch. The scientists as usual are vague about the actual applications of their discovery to practical problems of living, but they encourage at least a suspicion that ladies who deny themselves candy, bread, and potatoes in the desire to be beautiful may thereby curtail the activities of their brains. It is a horribly depressing thought, but there it is and we can do nothing about it except perhaps beg the scientists to take another look, and find us a theory more consistent with our notions of what a just world ought to be.

If He Won't Offend You When You Are Wrong, He Won't When You Are Right.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE ordinary office holder has little understanding of human nature. He has yet to learn the ancient truth that he who would save his life shall lose it. He plays the coward to hold his job, when a show of courage would serve his purpose equally well without sacrifice of his self-respect.

The one quality possessed in common by nearly all elected officials is moral cowardice.

In their eagerness to hold their jobs or win advancement, they sacrifice manhood and principle and follow in fear and trembling the course that offers the least threat of criticism.

This does not mean that all who fail to do right are cowards.

There are bold and predatory men who make a profession of hypocrisy and regard a certificate of election as a license to steal. These sacrifice no principle or honor, for they have none to sacrifice.

And there are others, possessed of honor and courage who compromise with wrong in order to do right.

No office holder, under our plan of government, has autocratic power. The thing that seems right to one seems wrong to another, or the one who wishes to do right is opposed by others who wish to do wrong, so that all progress is achieved by compromise.

The strongest and most righteous must at times compromise with his conscience, the opposition and the devil—or get nothing done.

But the ordinary man, whose one concern is to remain on the public payroll, outrages his conscience and sacrifices his manhood without other motive than the fear of criticism.

In a village he retains an incompetent school man or a stupid police officer to avoid making enemies; in Congress he surrenders a tropical empire or supports a raid on the Treasury to hold the favor of an organized minority in his district; in the President's chair he talks in meaningless generalities to avoid offending the partisans of evil.

Perhaps his strategy is successful. But it isn't necessary. Courage would serve the immediate purpose as well and pay a much greater profit in the end.

The American people admire courage and trust the man who dares to invite their wrath.

Lincoln, Cleveland and Roosevelt had the courage to make enemies in the cause of right, and the making of enemies was the foundation of their power and their fame.

Brooklyn Good Place.
Christian Science Monitor.

Perhaps that bear which showed up at a house in Brooklyn, N. Y., was simply looking for a place to hide until the Senate investigation of the New York Stock Exchange was completed.

National Men.
New York Times.

It has often happened that a great public emergency has caused personal and local interests to take a back seat in Congress while the necessary legislation is enacted. This is always the case in time of war. Then there is a great outburst of national feeling, and we get corresponding national action. None who lived through it can forget the wonderful flowing together of separate and subordinate wills and desires in 1917 and 1918, when the Nation was conscious that it had to act as one man or hazard its very life. In peace this is much less easy to achieve. Yet even in peacetime there come moments of great stress and danger when the individual and the locality have to subject themselves to the commonalty. It is because such a crisis now confronts the country that much may be hoped from President Hoover's appeal. Under the pressure of it, so evidently reinforced by public sentiment in the widest sense, it may be that our lawmakers will discover that they are first of all citizens of the United States. The problem is to find or develop a sufficient number of national men to work out and defend and embody in law a national policy.

Out!
Detroit News.

The fate of a self-starter was sealed Monday by the voters of his own State, when Maryland Republicans defeated former Senator Joseph I. France in his aspirations to the Presidency, and indorsed the renomination of President Hoover.

Flouting the People.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

The deepest and strongest demand of the American people in the last year has been that for reduction in the cost of Government. That demand has been refused by their representatives in Washington. No clearer proof could be found that representative Government has failed signally to show any representative quality. The action of the House on the economy bill is nothing but a slap in the face of the millions of men and women who have elected that House and are paying the bills they incur.

Even as it was originally planned, the economy bill was a feeble gesture, proposing a reduction of $200,000,000 out of a total annual cost of four billions. Yet that bill as it left the House provided for a reduction of only about $40,000,000.

Asleep at the Switch.
Macon Telegraph.

Senator Borah asserts that it is possible to cut $500,000,000 from our governmental expenses. Maybe, but not with the crew of cutters on the job now.

Hoover's Big Stick.
Brooklyn Eagle.

President Hoover must share the surprise of the public generally in the effectiveness of his message to Congress and his statement reiterating his demand for action to end the confusion over the tax bill. Surely, had he realized the possibilities of such action, he would have taken it sooner.

The important thing is that the President's message and statement have unquestionably served to expedite the business of balancing the budget, which is the paramount task before the Congress. Publicity is a powerful club and when wielded by a resolute man in the White House it can do wonders.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Melancholy Record of Legislation Guaranteeing Bank Deposits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with a great deal of interest your editorial on the Steagall bank bill this morning. There is nothing unusual in the fact that I read an editorial with interest and appreciation. This is the rule rather than an exception. But in this case the matter at hand is one which I have had reason to study carefully and have some facts you may wish.

Some years ago Nebraska passed the State guaranty bill. The purpose was to guarantee all deposits in State banks. Each bank advertised that its deposits were guaranteed by the State of Nebraska. Confidence naturally followed.

To make a long story short, the fund is now in arrears over $25,000,000 (yes, 25 millions). This is more than the total of the value of the remaining State banks. The State can do nothing about the matter. An effort to pay the depositors who lost was killed by the supreme court. It was ruled that the people could not legally be taxed to pay a favored few class legislation. So the guarantee meant nothing in this respect.

Soon after the law was passed, and befort it became obvious that the funds were not guaranteed by the State, a man who wrecked a bank was a hero. Each community felt its wealth doubled when a bank went bust. It meant that the bank loaned its funds to the community at random. They had the money. The bank went broke. The State paid the depositors. Then the community was in the position of eating its cake and also having it.

In one case a president wrecked his bank and skipped. The State paid off. When he came back to start another bank he was met by a delegation of citizens with a band. This is a fact, not fancy.

Of course, this attitude lasted only until the funds were exhausted. Soon it was no honor to wreck a bank. But the sign on the window that the funds were guaranteed by the State continued to lure depositors and lull them into a sense of security.

The billion dollars proposed by the author of the bill would soon be exhausted, as were the Nebraska funds. The United States National in New York broke for a quarter of a billion. If each State were to duplicate the Nebraska feat, over a billion would be eaten up.

H. PETERS.

Brief Tribute to Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, a Patriotic American.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following tribute to the late Admiral Chester, clipped from the Brooklyn Eagle, I think may be of interest to the readers of The Post, a paper which the admiral much admired:

"Colby M. Chester, rear admiral, U. S. N., retired in 1908, dies at the age of 88. He had fought in the naval battle of Mobile Bay under Farragut. He had been commandant at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, professor of naval science at Yale, commander in chief of the Atlantic squadron, but he will be chiefly remembered as the dreamer who began before the World War to plan for a great concession in Turkey, and in 1923 believed that his dream had come true.

"It was a stupendous fancy to put, eventually, a billion American dollars into a network of railroads in Anatolia, and a connection with the Mosul oil fields. Great Britain was keenly interested. Mussolini's Italy was also concerned. Probably Washington did all it could to help Chester. Lausanne was not hostile. But eventually Turkey revoked the concession, and Chester had no remedy.

"It is a reasonable theory that American trade and American prestige in the Near East would have profited immensely if the Colby M. Chester dream had materialized. Our country had the money; it had the engineers; it could have done what Chester wanted to do, but the politics of Turkey could not be figured on in advance. As for Rear Admiral Chester, he was a good American citizen on every test that could be applied to him."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

FATHER'S PROBLEM.

What do you do when a young fellow comes
And sits in the parlor and twiddles his thumbs,
Or settles himself in your favorite chair
And acts just as though he'd a right to be there?
When you know very well why he's hanging about,
Do you call a policeman and have him thrown out?

And you find on the sofa that dreamy-eyed chap,
And four times a week, though expenses you'd trim,
The maid sets a place at the table for him,
Where he ogles your daughter the whole mealtime through—
Tell me, you fathers, what is there to do?

When mother keeps saying the young man's all right,
But you're certain yourself that he's not very bright,
And you don't like his necktie, his collar or shoes,
Is it wise to start warfare you're certain to lose?
When he borrows your car and your gasoline, too,
Is there something to stop this a father can do?

I know what's on foot and I seem to recall
A father to whom I gave no thought at all.
I was after his daughter, and would he or no,
When I entered I thought he should get up and go.
So I fancy when young men are prompted to woo
There is not very much that a father can do.

TAKOMA PARK VOTE ASSAILED BY SMITH

Corporation Counsel Voices Objection to Election at Federation Session.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9153 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Reverberations of the recent town election in Takoma Park, Md., in which Mayor Ben G. Davis was defeated after a bitter political battle by F. L. Lewton, curator of the Smithsonian Institution, sounded in the meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation last night when J. Bond Smith announced his intention of resigning as delegate to the federation from the town of Takoma Park.

Asserting that it was with the most regret, but that it was obvious "that this step is necessary, because I find myself entirely out of sympathy both with the issues raised and with the methods pursued by the anonymous clique of persons who for reasons best known to themselves sponsored the candidates of the newly-elected town administration in the recent municipal election." Mr. Smith further stated that he did not believe it desirable to refer in detail to the matter, but that he wished to say that he "deplored the injection of partisan politics" into municipal elections, which up to that time have not been conducted on that basis.

"I am convinced that such methods can not but result adversely to the best interests of the Town of Takoma Park," he said.

Will Amplify Statement.

Mr. Smith stated that he plans to present his feelings on the subject in full at the meeting of the mayor and town council of Takoma next Monday night, when he plans to present his resignation both as corporation counsel and as delegate to the federation.

His action came at the end of a lengthy report in which he cleaned up the various items intrusted to the committee on legislation and legal action. For several moments after he had completed his announcement the hall remained in silence. Then, J. V. Morgan, a member of the committee, jumped to his feet.

"It is fitting that this devolve upon me as I am a member of the faction which Mr. Smith mentions. I move we elect Mr. Smith honorary member, with power to serve on all committees and that he be retained as chairman of this committee," he said. "I feel sure that every member entertains a high regard and affection for Mr. Smith and I feel that it would be a detriment and a disaster if we lose his valued services. W. B. Horne and Stephen James seconded the motion that he be elected an honorary member for two years and W. H. Reynolds moved that he be made chairman of the joint committee on sewage connection legislation, which Mr. Smith has been aiding in preparing.

Smith Visibly Affected.

Visibly affected by the demonstration, Mr. Smith accepted the membership and stated that he felt so great an interest in the federation that it would pain him greatly to sever his connection.

The Damascus Citizens Association was admitted to membership and the federation adopted the report of W. I. Cleveland, chairman of the membership committee, which provides for a drive to secure representation from the rural sections in order that the federation, which now represents 75 per cent, can be truly representative of the entire county.

Other matters of interest were acted upon.

Driver, Who Crashed House, Gets Fine and Jail Term

Charges growing out of a crash which tore a gaping hole in the side of a house on Sherman street in Fort Myer Heights brought a 30-day jail sentence and a fine totaling $142.45 to a Washington man before Arlington County Court Judge B. M. Hedrick yesterday. L. C. Carter, 49 years old, of 109 Ridge road southeast, the defendant, noted an appeal. His brother, Curtis Carter, 29 years old of the same address, forfeited $15 on an intoxication charge.

The elder Carter was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. County Policeman A. D. Langley testified he caught the two Carters only after a long chase in a comandeered automobile after he had punctured the gasoline tank of their car with pistol bullets.

The Carters are said to have crashed into the home of John Cave after they had failed to make a turn at the base of a hill on Sherman street.

In getting away they backed into a street car station and sped away, according to the testimony. Langley said the elder Carter, driving the car, refused to halt until his bullets pierced the gas tank, draining it.

JEWS LAUNCH DRIVE FOR $50,000 RELIEF

Funds Are to Aid Activities in Eastern Europe and Palestine.

Volunteer workers in the United Jewish Campaign gathered last night at the Jewish Community Center to launch the $50,000 drive for relief of Eastern European Jewry and Palestine reconstruction.

Conditions abroad are worse than at any time since the war, drive leaders told the workers in urging them to put forth their best efforts in behalf of the united appeal.

"Millions of Jews abroad, bereft of livelihood, are struggling desperately for existence, not merely because of the general crisis, but because of the special burden of antisemitism, discrimination and oppression under which they labor," Isidore Hershfield, chairman of the drive, told the gathering.

Dr. Louis J. Schwefel, of New York, guest speaker of the evening and former Washington rabbi, told the workers that the integrity of the Jewish people is at stake in continuing the institutions they have established in Europe and Palestine.

Louis E. Spiegler, executive director of the drive, gave final instructions to the drive teams about the manner in which the canvass is to be conducted.

Mrs. Charles Rosenthal, chairman of the women's division, and Morris Garfinkle, head of the men workers, also spoke.

Beginning today the workers will embark upon a two weeks' canvass.

NEW GERMAN BUDGET IGNORES REPARATIONS

days. Before it is completed the government will have to struggle against the usual batch of votes of nonconfidence.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening expects to weather these attacks with a safe majority. The recent election victories of Adolf Hitler's National Socialists affect state diets only and do not touch the Reichstag.

There was a heavy police guard in the vicinity of the Reichstag Building but no disorders developed.

Finance Minister Hermann Dietrich reported that the floating debt had been reduced in the last two years by 347,000,000 marks ($82,239,000), and the funded debt by 300,000,000 marks ($71,100,000). The total funded debt, he said, now is 10,208,000,000 marks ($2,419,296,000).

"Only one and a half billions are due to special expenses," the finance minister said. "All the debt is due to war reparations and war claims."

He listed these expenditures: Unemployment dole, 1,000,000,000 marks, war pensions, 1,200,000,000; social insurance, 477,000,000; debt payments, 420,000,000; interest and amortization on funded floating debts and reparations loans, 700,000,000; administrative expenses, 2,200,000,000; transfers to states and communes, 2,300,000,000.

Rudolf Brietscheid, Socialist, complimented the finance minister on the showing. He pointed out that the 1931 budget year ended with a deficit of 750,000,000 marks and said that tax receipts in 1931 fell 385,000,000 short of estimates.

GLEBE MAN IS HELD ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Scott Callaway Bound Over to Grand Jury; Offer of Bribe Alleged.

The preliminary negotiations which a dry agent said he carried on with Scott Callaway when the latter was planning to set up a still near his home at Glebe, Md., were described yesterday at a hearing which resulted in Callaway being held for action of the Federal grand jury.

In a sworn statement Agent H. D. McMunn, of the Waldorf office, said that Callaway offered him $50 a week. The negotiations, according to the statement, started when Callaway wrote the agent, asking him to come to see him. Then, McMunn said, Callaway said "how about setting up a still" and told him he had had one before.

"How would $50 a week suit you?" McMunn quoted Callaway as saying. McMunn told him he would take the matter up with the head of the squad and reported the conversation to his superiors.

Agreed Upon Confidence.

Later, the agent said, he told Callaway he had decided the matter should be between the two alone, and he instructed Callaway to let him know where the still would be and when it would be operating. Callaway agreed, McMunn's statement alleges.

A few days after this another man came to McMunn and told him where there was a still. It was near the location he said Callaway had decided on, so he went to Callaway and asked about it, his statement says.

McMunn said Callaway then admitted the still was his, and the arrest followed. Callaway was held in bond of $1,000 on charges of manufacture, possession and possession of articles for the manufacture of liquor by United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran, who held the hearing in Marlboro. Another man arrested with Callaway, Charles Conway, was released because there was no evidence to connect him with the still.

Another Prisoner Freed.

Taylor Shivers, of Nanjemoy, Md., was freed after a hearing before Mr. Parran yesterday because of insufficient evidence. The agents who arrested Shivers said that a wagon track led from a 300-gallon still to his house. The still and 1,000 gallons of mash were seized.

Cecil Welsh, of McConchee, Md., was held in bond of $1,000 on charges of manufacture, possession and possession of articles for the manufacture of liquor. He was arrested after a raid on a 150-gallon still, with 2,500 gallons of mash.

Change of Venue Given in Murder

Defendants in Bladensburg Shooting Also Granted Separate Trials.

Separate trials for the two defendants in the Bladensburg roadhouse murder were assured yesterday when Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, granted a severance and agreed to the removal of Peter Abbott's trial to Montgomery County.

Abbott and Thomas Simone were indicted together for the fatal shooting last fall of Grover Amick in a gun battle in which five other persons were injured. J. Frank Lillard asked a change of venue for Abbott on the ground that public sentiment in Prince Georges County would prevent a fair trial. Abbott is in the Marlboro Jail, and probably will be tried about June 9. Simone, who is represented by Attorney Robert W. McCullough, is still in Gallinger Hospital suffering from wounds he received in the fight.

The circuit court yesterday was occupied with the trial of Roosevelt Thomas, who was acquitted of a murder charge in connection with the death of Robert Savoy in Clinton last fall. A jury decided that Thomas had shot Savoy in self-defense.

Fairfax County Garden Tour Set for Week-End.

The tour of the Fairfax gardens arranged for Friday and Saturday of this week does not restrict one to garden displays. Interesting homes and buildings and documents tied up with the history of Fairfax County also will be accessible to devotees of Virginia history.

Ten homes and gardens are included in the group. Of particular interest is Ash Grove, the home of Sherman Wells, which has never been open to the public before. Ancient box and holly trees gaze benignly upon visitors and lend dignity to the house, built by Orlando Fairfax in 1790.

The 600 varieties of iris and rock plants in the garden, loved and nurtured by Mrs. Amos Chilcott, constitute a display in themselves and find friendly rivals in the garden of Mrs. Harry Blake at Bannockburn. Other gardens on display will be the Singing Pines, home of the Misses Lewis; the Oaks, home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Barbour, and Montague Farms, home of Mr. and Mrs. William Earle.

At the Fairfax Courthouse, built in 1800, is a copy of the will of George Washington. The Rectory, home of the Rev. and Mrs. Herbert A. Donovan, where Gen. Mosby, of the Confederate army, captured Gen. Stoughton; Washington's Inn, built in 1800, where Maj. and Mrs. Charles Pozer have their home, and Aspen Hill, home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cooper, are some of the residences that will be open.

Mrs. F. D. Richardson, whose place is nine-tenths of a mile from Fairfax, on Chain Bridge road, will serve tea to visitors when they have finished visiting her garden and have seen the historic documents on display there.

Tickets may be procured from Mrs. Richardson, at any of the homes included in the tour, or at the Democratic Women's Club. Directions for finding the homes may also be procured at any of these places.

Mrs. G. deFreest Larner has returned to Washington from New York for a brief visit at Wardman Park Hotel, where she and Capt. Larner formerly made their home.

BAKED STUFFED CABBAGE MAKES DELIGHTFUL CHANGE.

THANK you for your interesting letter and recipe of some weeks ago, Mary M. We are going to share them with column friends today and know that we may thank you in advance for these friends, for they can not other than profit from and enjoy your generosity.

"Nancy Carey—I lived in California many years and am familiar with Spanish-Mexican cooking as prepared by native Californian descendants of Spanish-Mexican parents. I send you a recipe for Tortillas as made by old ladies in California. Without the Tortillas one can not make Enchiladas.

"Very truly yours,

"MARY M."

Tortillas.

(From Mary M.)

(Before the Americans went to California about the year 1826, the Spanish-Mexicans knew nothing about baking bread and so made Tortillas.)

4 cupfuls of flour
½ teaspoonful of salt
Enough flour to sprinkle on board to keep dough from sticking.

Put flour and salt into bowl, add enough cold water to make a stiff dough and divide dough into four or five pieces. Roll out each piece of dough as thin as possible. Bake on top of the stove or in an old-fashioned iron skillet. To the Tortillas neither shortening nor baking powder is added. The Californians add a small bit of shortening. The Mexicans use the Tortillas in making Enchiladas and Enchiladas can not be made without them.

WEDNESDAY'S DINNER.

Pork Chops in Spanish Sauce
Steamed Rice
Baked Stuffed Cabbage
Apple Pudding
Coffee

Pork Chops in Spanish Sauce.

4 pork chops
1 tablespoonful each celery, carrot and onion—chopped
2 tablespoonfuls flour
½ cupful stock
½ cupful tomato juice
½ teaspoonful salt
⅛ teaspoonful pepper

Sear the chops on both sides in a hot frying pan. Remove and cook the chopped vegetables in the fat until they are nicely browned. Stir in the flour and add the stock, tomato juice and seasonings, stirring until smooth. Place the chops in the sauce, cover and simmer until tender. Add more stock, if necessary.

Baked Stuffed Cabbage.

1 medium head of cabbage
2 tablespoonfuls breadcrumbs
1 tablespoonful butter

Wash cabbage and soak it for 30 minutes in cold water, head down. Drain, cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain again and carefully remove inside leaves, leaving a wall 1 inch thick. Fill with vegetable filling. Cover with buttered breadcrumbs. Bake in moderate oven until brown.

Vegetable Filling.

3 tablespoonfuls bacon fat
2 slices bacon
1 stalk celery
1 onion
½ green pepper
½ cupful ground carrot
1 chopped cooked beet
½ cupful cooked rice
½ teaspoonful salt
Dash pepper

Heat fat in pan and fry bacon for a few minutes. Add finely chopped pepper, celery, onion and carrot. Cook gently for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add cooked beet and rice and mix well.

Apple Pudding.

1 cupful flour
1 cupful sugar
1 cupful milk
½ cupful butter
3 eggs—well beaten
3 chopped apples
¾ cupful raisins
1 cupful chopped walnuts

Caramel Sauce.

1 teaspoonful vanilla
½ cupful cream or milk
1 egg—beaten
Pinch of nutmeg

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

An evening tailleur of white crepe peau d'ange, with brown crepe flamenga vest and jacket. And pink tulle with a black tulle bow, for an effect "tres pastorelle." . . . . . .

NEW YORK, May 9.—The price of fame! 'Nif I ever see that smoke-colored hotel maid who just appropriated one whole sketch that was all ready to send to the newspaper—!!! Maybe I should be flattered, but I aindt-not, only mad. Because making a sketch like the one you see today is no small matter—and having to make it twice is just no fun a'tall a'tall!

Told you I would be goin' some place. Well, 'twas only a few days, and it was on Fashun Bizness. And was I a social success with my Dawn Mirage tan! That's my California ranch, you know, where I'm learning the latest in rattlesnakes.

Anyhow, it was fun to go to the beeg city and wear Paris gowns again—'specially the white peau d'ange one that shows so much, er, tan. And that reminded me to sketch an evening tailleur in white crepe peau d'ange for you today—because 'neath the little brown crepe flamenga vestee that just barely shows under the brown jacket of today's sketch, the dress itself has very decollete straps, and can be worn as a very formal white evening gown if desired.

Which makes an evening tailleur de luke, if you ask me.

'Nif I ever see that smoke-colored maid, who has one original Dah-ray drawing as a souvenir——!!!

A little shopping around for good materials at sales prices, a little figuring out and trying on with unbleached muslin, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to the Dare Department of The Washington Post and you will have a lovely new negligee! And do you need one! I should say you do, there being nothing that is better for everyone's morale than a lovely lady en deshabille, whether this be du matin or du soir. There being a time and a place for everything that makes a lovely lady more lovely, the negligee has an even more important place than it ever had before, these days. Better spend a few dollars on a new one—than have one that would cost you fifty in a shop, too.

Fashion French.

That word, deshabille, is so often used wrongly by students of French. Firstly, there is an accent on the last "e," which makes it sound "a," so the word is "des-ha-bee-ya," with the "ah" sound as in "father." Then "en deshabille" means undressed, but not entirely so! It means really "not dressed," but that one is either in morning dress, or partly dressed. And to be "en deshabille du matin" is to be in morning dress, what we call in English to be in negligee. If the word is spelled "deshabiller" it means to undress, or disrobe. And usage even more than pronunciation is important in this word.

* * * *

And, oh, yes, while about it on that trip where I lost the drawing, I noticed a most lovely pink tulle evening frock, with odd tucking at waist in lieu of a belt, and a black taffeta bow at the hip—to hear later from Mamzelle in Paris that this is a Callot model, very well received there, and most "pastourelle" in effect and charm.

* * * *

Yesterday I promised to tell you what hat and scarf she would wear with her navy blue dress and shoes, dark red belt and bag, and chalky navy gloves and stockings. You've probably guessed it—a bottle green flat crepe scarf and a bottle green paillisson straw hat? Yes, the green ties the dark red and the two shades of blue together—and the whole is beautifully harmonious and "tres difficile", to understand without seeing it!

Au revoir!

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

Four o'Clock Fatigue! A Munched Lunch, Nervousness, Insufficient Sleep Are a Few Contributing Causes.

NANCY was complaining that 4 o'clock was the zero hour for her. "Does fatigue ever get you," she asked, "in midafternoon about 4 o'clock? That's when I feel dumpy and dull, listless—sort of, with a kink in the old back, somewhere between the shoulder blades, a pain in the head, a droopy feeling all over. That's when this face falls and the bottom drops out of everything. Gosh, I got weary!"

Elsie Pierce.

* * * *

So we put Nancy through a third degree of cross-examinations that would have baffled a sharp-witted lawyer, but she held her ground. Yes, she did get eight or nine hours of sleep every night, and tried "like sixty" to get forty winks before midnight. Did she divide her day to include plenty of work and plenty of play, did she exercise and relax, and balance her day sanely and healthfully? Emphatically she vowed she did.

And what did she eat? An offhand "good enough" wasn't good enough for us and we determined to do some first-hand scouting. Luncheon at twelve-thirty and our problem solved. The corner drug store counter was her favorite eating place. "Olive sandwich and coffee," she considered a meal.

Not alone that, but two or three times out of every week, she would munch her lunch down hastily and rush frantically through the shops; too frequently on a fruitless window-shopping tour.

"Swell way to work up a case of nerves," we told her. "And before you get a breakdown you're going to pay the doctor a visit. Under protest she did. Imagine her surprise when the physician asked: "How about your bank account? Ever try taking out more than you put in; you can't, can you? Nor get more mileage out of your motor than the maximum your gas will go, nor more heat from your furnace than the fuel you feed it? What? So with your body. It needs some good food to go on. Can't go a whole afternoon on a "snack" especially when there's work to do. Bread and butter, cream, milk, plenty of vegetables and fruits, salads, a cooked dish occasionally. Something substantial, you understand. More food, more relaxation, more water and exercise too, and less rushing about. A bar of chocolate in midafternoon if you get droopy, an apple, a glass of milk will help route fatigue. You've overdrawn on your bank account of energy, so go easy on it and add more fuel for that precious body—yes?"

"Yes,"—Nancy promised—and she's a "new woman now" to use her own phrase. Try it yourself if you suffer from four o'clock fatigue.

If you would like my general, well-balanced diet, exercises, general health rules, send self-addressed, stamped envelope for them.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

THE CONSUMPTIVES' THINKING.

THERE is an old popular opinion that men with tuberculosis of the lungs are optimistic beyond all reason. This opinion makes out the consumptive as the granddaddy of all the tribes of pollyannas, more numerous now that the tribes of Israel ever were.

This notion crystallized into a Latin motto which proves that the highbrows can not alibi this matter and charge it to the lowbrows.

This abnormal hopefulness is even yet regarded as a symptom of consumption along with flushed cheeks. It never occurred to any one that it was strange that this characteristic could be a symptom of consumption, although it was not in evidence when the tubercular process afflicted the bones and joints, and just the opposite attitude was present in Addison's disease—a tuberculosis of the adrenals.

There is considerable evidence that tuberculosis of the lungs affects the quality of the thinking in one way. Robert Louis Stevenson wrote those things that made him famous when his tuberculosis was active and he was running fever. What he wrote when his disease was inactive, and he was running no fever, was commonplace. Some thought it bromidic.

When we analyze we find that the reputation of his writing was based on the evidence that it gave of what might be called fantastic thinking. It was characterized by imagery, weird conceptions, playful suggestions, and, at times, almost fairylike ideas, as well as poetic expression. Whatever the excellencies of writing based on these qualities, it lacks balance, poise, judgment. This was his manner of writing when he was under the influence of the poisons of the disease. When he was not, he wrote more normally and, in general, showed more plain, everyday, horse sense. Horse sense must be a very abundant commodity since nobody cares to read horse sense articles, stories, and such.

Such effect on the mind of a person with consumption can be established by a study of Stevenson's writings, even though the psychologists can not match it in other ways. But when it comes to the effects of consumpiton on the mind of the consumptive it is even flimsier. When a consumptive learns that he has this disease he receives a profound mental shock. He may stare death in the face. Even if he knows many cured consumptives, or does not fear death for other reasons, he is still confronted by matters of momentous importance. He must quit his activities, and perhaps must stop his money-making and become a passenger, he must go to bed for months, and loaf for a year or several years longer. He may need to leave his family or his home.

And then follow the years of his fight back to health and the mental attitudes that that involves. In all probability the mental response of consumptives to their surroundings is more the product of the men and their inheritance than it is of their disease. They react to this great stress and trial as they would have done to any other long-continued strain. Many of them are cantankerous. Probably they were just born that way. In sanitariums many kick about the food. Doubtless most of them would have complained in this respect had they been in any other kind of institution because of any other disorder.

On the other hand, many are courageous and heroic. Many are sweet and kind. In almost all cases they are about the same kind of people sick that they were when well—or at least, that they were when under great and prolonged strain.

A VERSATILE DISEASE.

Mrs. B. L. writes: Is there any cure for arthritis? Is it contagious?

REPLY.

There are more kinds of arthritis than there are kinds of fleas on a dog. One kind—acute rheumatic fever—may be contagious after a way. The others are not. Some kinds get well of themselves if given half a chance. Some kinds are curable. Most kinds tend to go on to the chronic form.

PIMPLES AND GREASE GLANDS.

L. J. writes: You say that pimples are caused largely by the grease glands. Will you advise me what to use on my face to empty grease glands? I have had a very oily skin and scalp as long as I can remember. I have tried different soaps without success. I am 28.

REPLY:

Among the effective methods are: Washing thoroughly with soap and hot water, steaming the face, shaving, scraping the face, Turkish baths. Of course, the grease glands are secreting constantly.

SHE MAY HAVE PEPARED IT.

O. K. writes:

1. I read the other day that a woman died of tularemia, or rabbit disease, by eating a wild rabbit. Are not the germs of this disease killed by cooking or roasting at a temperature of 100 or 110 degrees C. or 212 degrees F.?

2. Or, does the person get the germs from the rabbit skin while dressing the rabbit?

REPLY:

1. They are.

2. The woman probably prepared the rabbit for cooking and that was when she was infected.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me the name of three yellow roses, hybrid teas, that will do well with average care.

MRS. CHARLES F. S. A.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Souvenir de Claudius Pernet and Miss Amelia Gude are all reliable and beautiful. The last-named variety is a deep golden buff at the center, shading lighter at the edge. Souvenir, a golden-yellow sport of the Talisman is another rose that is very popular at this time.

I have a shady place in my garden where I want some blooming plants.

MRS. SIDNEY B. E.

Violas and primulas should bloom more or less continuously from May until frost.

Please explain the soil requirements of old-fashoned clarkia.

FRANCIS McC.

Clarkia does best in a soil that is light and not very rich. The late summer heat may prove fatal, but if you sow the seed a second time during the summer you will likely have beautiful flowers in the late fall. It is best to plant clarkia where it will be shaded during the middle of the day.

I have been given some cacti seed. Can you please tell me the best soil in which to germinate this seed. Is it true that few cacti seed germinate?

WILLIAM H. G.

Most cacti yields seeds abundantly. Ordinarily, in this country few of these seeds germinate and develop into mature plants because of unfavorable environment. The seeds are fertile, but they must be sown on a soil composed of thoroughly decomposed sod mixed with at least its own volume of sand. This soil must be sieved several times before it is used. Always avoid using manured soils, since it is too apt to hold moisture and is also a medium for producing germs of decay. Cactus plants do best in an open, drainable soil.

Alice I. W.—A second spraying at this time may prevent rust or other fungus disease when the hollyhocks begin to set buds.

Is a gardenia apt to do well in the house?

HELEN B. D.

No, the gardenia is really a greenhouse plant. If purchased in bloom, it usually completes its season of bloom and will even complete a period of rest, but it rarely sets or matures a second crop of flowers in the house.

What Today Means

"TAURUS."

IF MAY 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8:25 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m.

Cross currents will be at work on May 10. These will have the effect of nullifying, to a certain extent, efforts that at the time of initiation seemed to be full of hope and assured success. In order to convert defeat into victory, it will be necessary for you to be able to make swift decisions, and act on them.

Children born on this May 10 will have impatient minds and will quickly forge ahead of the usual school curriculum. They will show business aptitude, a proper regard for money and an eagerness to take part in the affairs of the world. They will have forgetful dispositions, but will not be temperless.

Born on May 10, you are a useful member of society—intelligent, industrious and independent. You do your small part to help the world forward, and are never one of the weaker links in any chain. You seem to belong to the heroic age, an most people find in you "that tower of strength which stands four-square to all winds that blow." You love complicated situations, and your spirit is always hungry for excitement. You are always capable of creating a stir and bustle out of lethargy and calm. You are not, however, a trouble maker, and always make certain that you are within your rights and not offending any personal susceptibilities.

Your personality is as charming as it is forceful, and you use as much tact as elbow in fighting your way through to any success. You prove that in most games of life, the race is to the swift and the battle to the ingenuous. You snatch your opportunities while others are still thinking about them and you have the brains to make good use of all materials in hand.

You are a guider of talk rather than a talker, and it is remarkable how you bring other people out of their shells and appear interesting. You can put the most humble or the most exalted being quickly at his ease. You are charitable, tolerant-minded, sympathetic, generous and affectionate.

Successful people born May 10:

Paul Tulane, philanthropist.
James Bryce, former British Ambassador at Washington.
John Sherman, statesman.
William R. Grace, ship owner.
Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General under Lincoln.

Culbertson on Bridge

THE TUG OF WAR

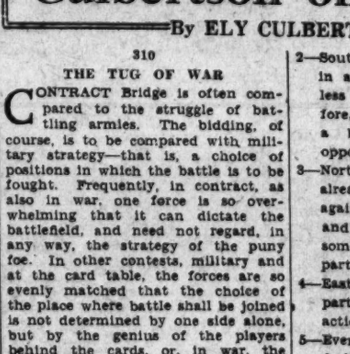
CONTRACT Bridge is often compared to the struggle of battling armies. The bidding, of course, is to be compared with military strategy—that is, a choice of positions in which the battle is to be fought. Frequently, in contract, as also in war, one force is so overwhelming that it can dictate the battlefield, and need not regard, in any way, the strategy of the puny foe. In other contests, military and at the card table, the forces are so evenly matched that the choice of the place where battle shall be joined is not determined by one side alone, but by the genius of the players behind the cards, or, in war, the general staff of the armies.

An example of the competitive element in the bidding, which is the strategy of the miniature warfare of the bizzare world of cards, was furnished in Hand No. 3 of the World Bridge Olympic, the world-wide Duplicate Bridge Olympic, recently conducted by the National Bridge Association. Here is competitive bidding at its finest. Either side can be pushed, in the bidding, to a point where their contract can not be made, by the shrewd utilization of the attacking power of the adversely held cards.

The North and South par on this hand was six diamonds, bid and defeated 1 trick, or opponents set one at five hearts or five spades. The East and West par was four spades, bid and made, or set one at five hearts or five spades.

The hand and bidding were:

West—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

South	West	North	East
	2♠(1)	Pass	3♠
4◇(2)	4♡	5◇(3)	Pass(4)
Pass	Dbl.(5)	Pass	5♡(6)
6◇(7)	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A bid of only one spade on this hand could not be condemned.

2—South has a hand quite powerful in attack, but practically worthless in defense. He should, therefore, seek to defend by erecting a bidding barrier against his opponents' efforts to reach game.

3—North fears that East, who has already supported spades, will again show his spade preference, and thus now shows that he has some tricks in support of his partner's Overcall.

4—East temporarily leaves to his partner the decision as to further action on the hand.

5—Even without a trump trick, West feels that the contract of five diamonds should be defeated.

6—East does not share his partner's confidence.

7—South knows the contract of six can not be badly set. He holds singletons in two suits, and his partner, who has supported his bid, must be short in the third.

There is nothing of particular interest in the play of this hand. South must lose 1 club and 1 spade trick, and thus go down 100 points at his contract to make 6—a satisfactory result, although the Defensive bid of six was not necessary, if North and South played perfect defense, as neither five spades nor five hearts can be made.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Competitive bidding at the Contract table bears a close relation to the strategy of warfare. It is an effort between opposing armies to choose the best possible battlefield.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

East—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

"Satan Finds Mischief—!"

DEAR Frances McDonald: I have always kept up with your column and now I am asking you to help me.

For nine months I have been married to the man (23) I thought was my ideal, but now I am beginning to think I am wrong.

My husband has not been working for three months, and during the time he was not looking for work, he was spending at his mother's home. I have been keeping up all expenses, apartment, &c., all of this time, and have been doing cooking and cleaning with a little of his help.

His mother and father are the type who always try to boss and rule someone else's home. Having my husband over there so often, they had a good chance to tell him of my faults, whatever I did wrong, or whatever didn't suit them. Whenever he came home at night he would tell me of an incident (which had been preached to him) and of course I would ask him if his mother couldn't find something else to talk about besides me. That would mean an argument. A few days later I would hear another, until I can't any more.

He never picked an argument until he lost his job and saw his mother too often. Everything I did before was perfect.

They kept on preaching and getting so low as to say mean, unforgivable things about me and my people. In spite of all these things I kept on trying myself and went out of my way at times to please him and them.

I want you to understand I come from a very good family. My people have always kept me strict, free from anyone or anything. Now I am confronted with nearly everything except peaceful married life and lastly a man who is failing to be my ideal.

Please tell me what to do. I hope I haven't written too much. But please help me.

Please don't tell me to tell his parents to mind their own business or tell him to choose between us. I have tried every way imaginable. As ever, "FAITHFUL."

You remember the old saying—"Satan finds mischief for idle hands!" Well, this is an instance of that very thing. When the boy was busy he had no time to listen to woman-talk. He was a man busy about a man's affairs. Now he sits around his parents' home exchanging small talk and degenerating into an old nanny for want of something better to do.

When next he embarks on his new theme of your shortcomings, just change the subject and ask him where he sought work that day. Or even beat him to it and begin the moment you see him. You recall the "Taming of the Shrew" do you not? Well, try the same system and see how it works.

Of course this advice is based upon the supposition that his criticisms are unfounded. But in any case no woman should submit to criticism, nor plan to spend her life with a nagger. Your regard for him will surely die a miserable death, and you should be able to convince him by your own attitude toward him that his conduct was having that effect. If you continue to accept denunciations from him one minute and endearments the next, you can not expect him to respect you as a man should respect his wife.

Personal dignity is all that is needed in your case. Exert it.

CIRCUS WILL UNLOAD AND SET UP SUNDAY

Although the show does not go until Monday afternoon, the elephants will be thirsty Sunday from their strenuous labors in pushing the heavy wagons from the train to the Camp Meigs circus grounds.

On Sunday the acres of canvas which make the "big top" will be unfolded, spread and guyed for the "greatest show on earth," Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's circus.

There are 100 clowns with the show this year to intersperse with their pantomime and gags, the thrills of the aerial acts, bareback riding and wild beast performances.

More than 800 persons make up the list of performers in the show and, of course, this does not include the animals of most every variety which will perform or be on exhibition.

Although the days of circus parades, when school attendance was almost negligible, is over, the unloading of the trains and the setting up of the tents have taken the place of the procession.

Many persons will watch the informal parade, when all the wagons loaded with animals and accouterments will be wheeled from the train to the circus grounds.

P.-U. C. Still Undecided On Gas-Holder Permit

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, said yesterday that the utilities body is still far from reaching a decision on the application of the Washington Gas Light Co. to erect a gasholder at Riggs road and the Baltimore & Ohio tracks in the Northeast.

George A. G. Wood, president of the gas company, will confer with Gen. Patrick today on the matter. It is understood he has been in conference also with representatives of Catholic University and other Catholic institutions which were among the chief opponents of the preferred site.

GLEN ECHO PARK

Amid a flood of glorious May sunshine, Glen Echo Park officially opened the 1932 season at noon last Saturday. And what a crowd was on hand!

Along about noon, the street cars began hauling crowds, and many went by automobile.

Once again the hills of Maryland rang with the rumble of the coaster dips, and the shouts of the merry-makers zooming through the air on the airplane swings. The Old Mill this year, with its newly installed scenery, was a distinct thrill and the old favorites, such as the shooting gallery, "dodgem rides," midway house of fun and dozens of other diversions were attracting the visitors as a magnet might steel filings.

On Saturday, MacWilliams opened the season in the ballroom with his excellent musicians to a capacity audience.

Sunday, the crowds were also much in evidence, many picnic parties taking advantage of the new and better facilities offered by the management for their convenience and comfort. Everything was in motion all day and evening, except the ballroom, which is dark on Sunday nights. If the opening can be taken as a criterion, the 1932 season of Glen Echo Park is going to be a record breaker.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE apprehension of a factual record of blessed events, it seems, is not so difficult a feat as some of us who have never specialized in it have been led to believe. It appears that the news wires are all bogged down with the things.

For example, I find on my desk an A. P. dispatch consisting of nothing less than a pseudo-philosophical dissertation on the intrinsic advantages of parenthood, which have become, surprisingly to many, as helpful a part of the Hollywood career as good voices were when the screen went vocal.

Some of the most effulgent of the stars, boastful of recent offspring, find their popularity—employing the boxoffice as a barometer, of course—is increased, indicating motherhood or fatherhood to be anything but an impediment to art and glamour. Others are happily public in their announcement of impending interesting events.

When Norma Shearer added motherhood to her other accomplishments three years ago, some of her friends were doubtful. But it wasn't long before everyone knew that she had become even more alluring than previously to "her public."

Bebe Daniels and Bessie Love were next among the more notable, and then came Vivian Duncan. Their popularity grew and Nils Asther, Miss Duncan's husband, and the husband of Miss Daniels, Ben Lyon, say they consider themselves all the better actors through the deepening influence of fatherhood.

Once Hollywood's elect kept prospective blessed events a secret and contracts contained penalty clauses for parenthood, on the theory that domesticity destroyed romance.

Now Mary Astor, Helen Twelvetrees, Sue Carol and Florence Vidor make it known far in advance that they will be mothers this year.

Mary Astor and Dr. Franklin Thorpe have decided their baby shall be born in Honolulu. Sue Carol and Nicholas Stuart will desert their theater engagements in the East to return to Hollywood for the great day. The baby of Florence Vidor and Jascha Heifetz, eminent violinist, also is to be born in Hollywood.

Helen Twelvetrees and Frank Woody expect a child in October. Dolores Costello and John Barrymore have one child and volunteer the information that another is coming.

Mildred Davis decided years ago that wifehood and motherhood excel a professional career. Her husband, Harold Lloyd, says he has accumulated artistic eclat—whatever that is—because of fatherhood, and Natalie Talmadge and Buster Keaton chime in with the declaration that that is the situation in their case, too.

Hi, Walter, how are you feeling by now? Me too!

And through the mails comes a broadside announcing the "Kate Smith 'Memories' Song Book," containing a list of titles longer than you have been in town!

Emblazoned on the lower half of the "half-sheet" are several familiar scenes photographed when Kate arrived in Washington to play her recent week at RKO-Keith's. Then there is another in which Eddie Cantor is presenting her with a large silver cup, or Kate is presenting Eddie with a large silver cup, you can't tell which!

Oh, oh! Scratch this entire item out, folks! There's the stinger down in the lower left-hand corner—"Please remit 50 cents"!

Mr. Leonard B. Schloss, the affable and energetic manager of Glen Echo Park, is following his annual custom of "affording himself great pleasure" by mailing the dramatic desks duotone cards encompassing the gratuitous privileges of the park and the Crystal Swimming Pool, once it is opened on May 28. This column hereby wishes to express its grateful appreciation of a thoughtful gesture that will just possibly be availed of more often than Mr. Schloss may have suspected at the moment of signing his name!

Then on the first mail was that card from Jean Harlow, out in Beverly Hills, "wish you wuz here-ing, or we wuz there-ing" in most cordial fashion and signed by "Jean, Mother and Dad"—meaning, of course, the charming platinum blonde herself; her mother, Mrs. Bello, and stepfather, Count Mareno Bello, recent visitors in Washington who were thoroughly enchanted by the city.

It may interest you to know that a part of the message was, "The first vacation I have we are coming back to visit, NOT to work."

A good bit of money changed hands over Earle Theater way yesterday morning when the Warner Brothers managers in the Washington territory convened for their weekly conclave.

Most of them were sure that Mercedes and Mlle. Stantone, headliners at the Earle this week, divorced from the footlights and other accoutrements of a packed theater, could not successfully accomplish the telepathic tranference of melody from the mind of a disinterested spectator to the piano—at least not without the trick's being discovered. The parimutuel machines rang up almost as much as they did on the Kentucky Derby!

Then the party adjourned to a large rehearsal hall in the Earle Theater Building, where there is a grand piano, and one by one the boys led Mercedes far down the corridor to evade every possibility of code, collusion, skullduggery or what have you, and were sure they had him stuck!

So Mlle. Stantone played all of their selections correctly and that was that—except for the business of paying off!

Don't ask me how they do it. Mercedes can't explain it himself—so he says!

There is a funny line in the Charley Chase comedy being presented at the Palace this week.

Charley is a "dude" clerk on the ranch who finally, to win the esteem of the boss' daughter, rigs himself up in an outfit of chaps, ten-gallon hat, spurs, high-heeled boots and all the rest of it. When the regular cow hands are ready to start for the railroad station, miles away, to meet the boarding-school pet of the outfit they turn to Charley and say:

"Well, come on, Mr. Coolidge!"

Or don't you remember those newsreel shots of the former President?

When the extended engagement of "The Doomed Battalion," at the Rialto, comes to an end this week, the Ninth street Universal house will revert to Friday as the day on which its future bills will be inaugurated. This will leave the Earle the sole survivor of the policy of opening the new programs on Saturday—a circumstance that is made imperative by the vaudeville bookings that are so popular at Thirteenth and E.

Incidentally, when Mae Clarke and Lew Ayres open in "The Night World" at the Rialto this Friday, a strictly sound-screen program will be adhered to, no "name" act having been booked to perpetuate the policy experimented with, with varying degrees of success, with Lilyan Tashman, Dorothy Mackaill and Victor McLaglen.

So heavy were the phone calls requesting reservation of seats for the impending "road show" engagement of "Grand Hotel" at Loew's Columbia that announcement was made by the management last night that phone orders can no longer be accepted. Mail orders, however, will continue to be filled in the order of their receipt.

The RKO-Keith executives, speaking of impending engagements, are so confident that "State's Attorney," starring John Barrymore, originally scheduled to open on Fifteenth street Friday will prove one of the sensations of the season that the opening has been moved forward two days. "State's Attorney," therefore, will be on view for the first time locally tomorrow.

By the way, what do you do about a furnace in weather like this?

Plans for added support of the National Symphony Orchestra for next season were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Associations at the National Education Association's headquarters.

MUSIC FEDERATION'S WORK FOR IDLE TOLD

A special concert in honor of the visiting members of the board of governors of the National Federation of Music Clubs, who are holding their annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, was presented yesterday by the Federated Junior Clubs at the Sears-Roebuck Art Galleries.

Mrs. Katharyn R. McClelland, of Philadelphia, reported at the board meeting yesterday that interest in music increases in periods of economic stress and that 200 new music clubs were formed under the direction of the federation last year. Nineteen States and the District of Columbia, she said, showed an increase of music club activity.

The clubs, Mrs. Elmer James Ottaway, president of the national organization, said, are striving to lighten the burden of unemployment. She reported that since the federation gave its "Sing to Serve" pledge at its last meeting six months ago, 2,000 benefit musicales have been presented, and $200,000 realized to relieve distress through the concerts. Twenty-two State choral festivals will be held this year.

The program presented by the junior federation was as follows: A toy symphony playing a piece by Cramm; Charlton Meyer, 6-year-old soloist with the National Symphony, pupil of Frances Gutelius, played a Haydn sonata; a string quartet, George Amouri, Emile Joseph, Elizabeth DuPre, and Thomas Goldman, presented by Ivalee Newell, played a Handel gavotte. The Church of the Pilgrims' junior choir, trained by Esther Linkins, gave two numbers, one by Bach and one by Novello-Burron, with incidental solos by Imogen Bird and Charles Burton; and a solo from "The Messiah" by Morie Thomas.

Gerald Rodisky, violin pupil of Josef Kaspar, played "Scene de Ballet," by de Beriot; Freida Velly, pupil of Kathryn Arthur, played Paderewski's "Minuet;" Philip Wright, pupil of Daisy Fickenscher, gave a cello solo, "The Swan," by Saint-Saens; Jacqueline Embrey, pupil of Evelyn Davis, danced "Spanish Impressions," by de Torres. The Joseph Kaspar violin ensemble closed the program with the "Andante," from the Fifth Symphony of Tschaikowsky.

British Jobless Total Rises

London, May 9 (A.P.).—A considerable rise in unemployment was shown today by the monthly report of the Ministry of Labor, which recorded 84,000 more jobless than there were a month ago. Most of the unemployed are in the coal mining, cotton, wool, jute and hosiery industries.

MUSIC WEEK OPENS WITH FINE CONCERT

Mme. Sohumann-Heink and Philadelphia Harmonica Band Features.

Music week in the Capital's George Washington Bicentennial celebration was opened last night by the Philadelphia Harmonica Band, directed by Albert N. Hoxie, and with Mme Ernestine Schumann-Heink as soloist, in Constitution Hall.

Eight-year-old Roland Pugliese, mascot of the band, provided the feature of the evening with his solo rendition of Dvorak's "Humoresque." Roland's number was supposed to be sixth on the program, but Director Hoxie said the young fellow was so sleepy that his number was moved up to fourth.

Mme. Schumann-Heink opened her solo appearance with Mendelssohn's "The Lord Is Mindful of His Own." This was followed by the Londonderry air, "Danny Boy," which brought forth such a round of applause that she sang "The Cradle Song," by Brahms, as an encore.

The playing of Rimsky-Korsakov's Chanson Arabe, from "Scheherazade," arrangement by Kreisler, by Raymond Kraus, 1928 Philadelphia harmonica champion, proved another feature of the program. Eleven-year-old Robert McCabe was the vocal soloist during the playing of Logan's "Pale Moon." For a youngster, his voice was extremely good and he was loudly applauded.

John Maywhort and Kenneth Moore, both members of the band, played the saxophone and cornet, respectively, when Victor Herbert's "Kiss Me Again," from "Mlle. Modiste," and "Italian Street Song," from "Naughty Marietta," were played. Charles Newton and Max Jarvis accompanied the band on the xylophone and marimba for these two numbers, both of which were vigorously applauded. "Drums in My Heart," from "Smiling Through," by Youmans, in which the chorus was sung by the entire band, was another popular number.

The band of about 60 boys, ranging from 8 to 18 years in age, marched into the hall in military fashion, preceded by the United States and band's flags. The members were dressed in blue military uniforms. Each boy had several differently pitched harmonicas. In a few of the numbers several of the young musicians played two instruments at once. Their skill in transpositions, crescendoes and trill effects was particularly effective. At the end of the concert the audience remained seated until the band had marched out of the hall, led by Mr. Kraus, and brought up in the rear by Roland Publiese and Director Hoxie.

Leslie S. Jones was the piano accompanist.

It is to be doubted that the spring and summer season of the National Theater Players will afford any more eloquent testimony of the capability and skill of this admirable repertoire company than was offered by last night's letter-perfect performance of this thoughtfully written play, naively linking the strictly inhibited Victorian era with the so-called social license of the present day.

Mr. Milne's drama of a love so great that it braved the penalties of an illicit "marriage" does not fall within the category of sprightly entertainment, but it may be relied upon to hold the interest of discriminating theatergoers not averse to an intelligent, sympathetic and at times deeply moving treatment of a theme that has not appeared too often in the American theater in recent years. And it does impose exacting requirements upon its pivotal characters, while presenting something more than merely fragmentary opportunities for practically the entire roster of the Players, thus taking rank as an ideal vehicle for the purposes to which it is currently being put.

The action of "Michael and Mary" covers a round quarter-century. It begins in the British Museum in 1905, when two wayfarers strike up a casual and desultory conversation that leads almost at once to a lifelong attachment. The girl in the case, however, has been deserted by her husband and can not secure a divorce, not knowing where he is. The young man, whose imagination she has so pathetically captured, is ambitious to become a writer. They form a compact, struggle along together for a year and then are married, despite the probable survival of the undivorced renegade, who sure enough, eventually presents himself in search of blackmail and drops dead in their home, a victim of a heart attack, induced by the excitement of the moment. Thus does the threat they have dreaded for fifteen years come true, its solution complicated by their desire for the self-respect and happiness of their young son. His own precipitate marriage occasions the revelation of the complete family history to him and his bride on their wedding day.

A. A. Milne has evolved no fantasy, no whimsy, here, but a sound and substantial piece of playwrighting, more in the manner of the late Arnold Bennett or Galsworthy than Sir James M. Barrie.

The burden of the piece falls upon the shoulders of Leona Powers and Donald Woods, as the lovers of the title, and is borne with easy grace by them both. Miss Powers' portrayal of Mary is marked by sincerity, perfect reading and utmost finesse; Mr. Woods, by a convincing quality that is particularly free from the taint of theatricalism. Two scenes that are memorable are those which he plays in the first act with Burke Clarke, as his clergyman father, and in the last act with Owen Davis, jr., as his own son.

Adelaide Hibbard, Raymond Bramley and Forrest Orr have scenes that afford them adequate outlets for their contrasted talents, and Katherine Givney, Ona Munson, Clifford Brooke and the youthful Mr. Davis fare by no means ill in the allotment of parts. Karl Nielsen, like Miss Givney, is calleed upon to "double" in comparatively minor roles.

Mr. Squires' tasteful settings contribute appreciably to the superlatively excellent rendition of a conspicuously meritorious play.

GAYETY

"WINE, WOMEN AND SONG." Columbia Burlesque with Billy Fields, Chuck Callahan, Gypsy Rae and Gertrude Reed, Betty DuVal and Georgia Southern. Reviewed by William I. Wright.

Patrons of the Gayety will be well pleased with the "Wine, Women and Song" company playing there this week. As suggested in the opening number, a musical cocktail, spiced with beautiful girls and flavored with entertaining comedy, is yours to enjoy.

In addition to an already long list of stars, Manager Lake offers Betty DuVal, a blonde heartbreaker. This is her first appearance in Washington and it was the unanimous verdict of the customers that she should return soon and often. Her pleasing voice and charming personality do much to put this show over.

The redhead sisters of the Columbia circuit are back greeting their many friends and admirers. This sister team is one of the best in the business—Gypsy Rae and Gertie Reed.

Georgie Southern, that whirlwind of beauty and knockout surprises has been held over from last week by popular demand. Also, we again have Jeanette Alabassie and Dot Alexander, two young women who received a big hand at every appearance.

Of course, burlesque isn't complete without fun and foolishness and so Billy Fields, "Chuck" Callahan and Lou Powers, who are so funny they could make a cigar store Indian laugh, are in the cast. They present one hilarious skit after another to keep the house in a continuous uproar. Assisting are Lew Denny and big Bob Wallace.

Northeast Group Scores Curb on Fund for Parks

A request that the Senate committee strike out the amendment in the District of Columbia appropriation bill that will prohibit the spending of any more money for playgrounds and public parks, was asked in a resolution indorsed by the Northeast Washington Citizens Association last night at a meeting in the Ludlow School, Sixth and G streets northeast.

A resolution was also indorsed to request the Refuse Division of the District Government to repair the solid rubber tires on the wheels of the ash wagons. They say that the rubber on many of the wheels are broken and this causes a disturbing noise at all hours.

Motion Picture Engineers See New Gadgets of Craft

Small "Talkie" Machine for Use in Schools and Individual Amplifier Demonstrated at Meeting; Research Wizards Speak.

A talking picture machine, which will be so inexpensive and easy to operate that its use in schools, clubs and the home will be practical, was demonstrated yesterday before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Alfred Goldsmith, president of the society and vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, said the new machine should increase the number of movie goers by stimulating interest in the silver screen.

The projection apparatus is small and uses narrow gauge film. The United Research Corporation and the Radio Corporation of America developed the novel exhibit.

A coat-lapel size microphone, a development of the Bell Telephone Co. laboratories in New York, weighing 1½ ounces, used to amplify the voices of speakers, was another novelty demonstrated at the meeting.

Lieut. Charles E. Fraser, of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, told the film men that the United States Navy maintains the largest entertainment enterprise in the world, with more than 300 theaters two large film distributing exchanges and 1,000 feature programs, constantly in circulation.

Fraser said the expense of the movie entertainment of the Navy "is not entirely a public expense, as much of the equipment is purchased from private funds collected from the personnel. Virtually all the ships in territorial waters of the United States have been equipped with sound motion picture apparatus, he said.

S. K. Wolf and J. E. Tweedale, of the Electrical Research Products of New York, told the engineers that it is as much the duty of the motion picture exhibitor to provide good hearing conditions and minimum noise as it is to provide good ventilation and seating for the comforts of the patrons.

The meeting was attended by about 200 members, and will hold sessions until Thursday, when a banquet will terminate the convention.

TUESDAY MAY 10, 1932 SPORTS

BROWN BLANKS INDIANS, 3-0, IN DUEL WITH FERRELL

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THEY turned the calendar back 30 years last night at the reformed brewery that is now Portner's Arena at Alexandria and the 2,000 persons who peered through the reeking tobacco smoke sat in on a throw-back to the back-room days of the Sullivan, Ketchell era. And they liked it.

The old brewery rang with the din of flying fists from the first preliminary to the wind-up, as they call it, and it did seem that here was a sort of contraband fisticuffs with the law liable to swoop down upon the place at any moment. Shades of the days of the old London prize ring rules permeated the thickened atmosphere, so sequestered did the entire affair seem to this observer.

And the fights were in keeping with those bruising battles of old. Not a semblance of a waltz marked the program. The lads were in there throwing leather from bell to bell and even between gongs, so enthusiastically did they go to work for the comparatively meager purses that the Day Nursery can afford to pay.

Handsome Warren Van Sciver emerged as the winner of the night's first affray, with his seventh consecutive scalp dangling from his purple tights. They said Van could not go six rounds; but K. O. Burns, of Baltimore, will attest that he can, and at good speed.

Young Van contributed to the nineteenth century motif with his display of the near-forgotten art of in-fighting, and he was continually popping Burns' head back on his shoulder blades with short uppercuts and jolts to the heart and stomach, winning a clear-cut decision that maintains his unsullied record.

None of Young Van's six previous opponents had answered the bell for the third round, and K. O. Burns would have been a similar victim had Van possessed the ring lore to press his advantage after a steaming left to the chin that had Burns numb from his neck up.

Washington's own Joe Grimm, Billy Strickler, matched his physiognomy against the leather cesti of Billy Fiemster and won the decision by a goodly margin in the second fight of the night.

Confronted with a fine target in Fiemster's angular body, Strickler went to work from the outset on the midsection of the North Carolinian and hardly raised his attack until he had piled up a margin in the first five rounds that would carry him to victory in any event except a knockout.

Fiemster changed his tactics in the final two rounds and stood off the pot shot Strickler from long range and it developed into a contest between Fiemster's piston-like arms and Billy's countenance, but Strickler survived the ordeal and wound up the fight with a flourish by a return to the body of his fast-tiring foe.

The crowd that was on its feet during the last two rounds of the Strickler-Fiemster fight was on the edge of the chairs from the opening bell of the Overlin-Smallwood brawl that was pregnant with possibilities of a knockout in every round.

Overlin, hitting like a superhetrodyne mule, clouted Smallwood on every exposed point and what natural phenomenon caused Smallwood to remain erect this department can not state. But stand up he did and he countered with some wallops on his own hook that had Overlin standing off and wondering where Smallwood found his fund of strength. Overlin won the decision.

This observer disagreed with one decision. How Referee Charlie Short deduced that Billy Landers beat Benny Schwartz in the final, I am not prepared to say. Landers' rallies in the sixth and seventh rounds couldn't wipe out Schwartz's lead and the Baltimorean came out of the fog to win the eighth handily. They both hit enough to boost them to the top of the major league batting averages this morning.

Germany and Italy Win In Davis Cup Net Play

Berlin, May 9 (A.P.).—Germany completed a clean sweep of its first round Davis Cup series with India today, winning the final two singles matches for a 5—0 victory.

Gottfried von Cramm defeated Mohan, 6—3, 8—6, 6—3, and Daniel Prenn disposed of Charanliva, 6—3, 6—1 6—1.

Germany will meet Austria in the second round.

Genoa, Italy, May 9 (A.P.).—Italy today took the opening two singles matches of its Davis Cup series with Egypt.

George de Stefani, ace of the Italian squad, defeated Pierre Grandguillot, Egyptian captain, 9—7, 6—1, 6—4, and Count Oscar deNinerbe won from Loutfallan Mahid 6—3, 8—6, 8—6.

The matches were postponed from yesterday because of rain.

British Girl Net Star May Seek U. S. Crown

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Kathleen Stammers, England's newest and youngest tennis sensation, is said to be considering an invitation to come over and compete in the women's national championships at Forest Hills this summer.

The 18-year-old star recently celebrated her entrance into the senior division by winning the Surrey championship with the loss of only one set in six rounds. She defeated both Joan Ridley and Dorothy Round, among others, in capturing the title.

English critics declare Miss Stammers hits harder than any woman player in the game, not excepting this country's Helen Wills Moody. Her game, they say, has been built entirely upon speed, but she has attained a degree of accuracy sufficient to win. She also is credited with remarkable fighting spirit.

Landers Wins Bout From Schwartz

Overlin Beats Smallwood on Points at Portner's.

By JACK ESPEY.

BENNY SCHWARTZ, veteran Baltimore bantamweight who has met four world's champions, was forced by a referee's decision to dip his colors to Sailor Billy Landers, of Norfolk, in the final and most interesting of five rousing bouts in Portner Arena last night.

Referee Charlie Short's decision was regarded just by a majority of the 2,000 enthusiasts present, but a chorus of disagreement came from ringsiders, including newspapermen, in whose minds Schwartz won clearly. The crowd was with Landers, who long ago was received as a fair-haired boy in local fistic circles.

A whirlwind of gloves all the way, the bout saw the stronger Landers swinging wildly on numerous occasions and receiving for his efforts nicely timed blows from both of Schwartz' educated fists. When Landers struck, however, it was apparent he did more damage, and in the seventh round the Baltimorean was on "queer street."

Landers Hits Solidly In Seventh.

Landers forced the fight, shooting a vicious right in the direction of Benny's head, but he did not land solidly until the seventh when he caused his foe to hold on. Sensing a knockout, the sailor tried to push Schwartz off for a finishing blow, only to miss completely or strike glancingly as the veteran ducked, rolled and dodged. Twelve years of ring experience stood between Landers and a kayo victory.

At close range Landers hustled Benny around like a baby doll and planted many a hard blow to the ribs, but as often as he did this he caught a left jab or hook coming in. Schwartz rocked him several times with these lefts and also feinted him into openings for whistling rights that knocked him off balance.

As the end neared Schwartz elected to slug it out and appeared to have the better of a furious exchange in the eighth and final round.

The card as a whole was easily the best yet presented by the Alexandria Day Nursery Athletic Association. There wasn't a moment's rest for the nervous.

Overlin Defeats Smallwood.

Joe Smallwood, Washington welterweight, and Ken Overlin, Norfolk sailor, staged a pulse-tingling scrap for eight rounds preceding the finale. Overlin, by virtue of an early lead piled up with a series of long left hooks to the head and body, received the decision. However, Smallwood scored the only knockdown and was punching the stronger at the conclusin.

This was Smallwod's first defeat since last July when Harry "Kid" Groves defeated him at Fort Washington. In the interim he had won close to twenty fights in Virginia, Pennsylvania and Delaware, where he is now rated as welterweight champion.

Smallwood staked his chances on a right that flew straight from the shoulder as Overlin rushed in with a left hook. But Joe's aim was bad and after missing he found himself bound tightly in Overlin's embrace. The sailor's holding tactics marred what otherwise was a pleasing performance.

The third eight-rounder of the program resulted in a decision for Billy Strickler, local light heavy, over Bill Fiemster, Carolina champion. This bout had the fans on their feet in the last two rounds when the lanky Carolinian rallied to bombard Strickler with both mitts from long range as Billy rushed in for a body attack.

Strickler Shows Rare Courage.

Strickler relentlessly charged into his taller opponent, seeking to wear him down with punches to the stomach and ribs. Fiemster didn't appear to relish it during the first six rounds and held more than he fought. But when he finally opened up Strickler was in a tough spot, and Billy, still boring in, displayed rare courage in keeping his feet.

For the first time in a short but sensational career, Young Van, Capital middleweight prospect, was forced to travel the distance to gain victory. He came through with flying colors at the expense of K. O. Burns, of Baltimore, in the main preliminary of six rouunds.

Van won every round except the fourth by dint of a speedy attack and had Burns groggy in the last session. Donald First, Baltimore lightweight, outpointed Marino Marini, in a four-round opener.

ARA EUROPEAN CHAMP.

Vienna, May 9 (U.P.).—Ignacio Ara, of Spain, won the middleweight boxing championship of Europe tonight by knocking out Kid Neubauer, of Austria, in the eleventh of their scheduled fifteen-round bout at Inglemann Sports Arena. Ara weighed 144; Neubauer, 142.

MAT "TITLE" AT STAKE TONIGHT

DeGlane, Claimant of Crown, in Bolling Feature.

TONIGHT, while Jim Londos wrestles some place against a colleague for the "world's championship" and Strangler Lewis does much the same thing in another section of the country, Henri DeGlane will rassle Frank Wycoff at Bolling Field for the Bowser System's own interpretation of the much-maligned "championship."

It will be, in case the rain holds off, Washington's first outdoor show of the season, and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has surrounded this offering with four other bouts, the first of whch starts at 8:30 o'clock.

The heaving and mauling for the championship of this particular universe will be conducted rain or starlight tonight. In the event of a precipitation, the show goes on indoors, in one of the large Bolling hangars.

De Glane Is "Fiery" Type.

DeGlane is a French Canadan and is reported to be "fiery." Wycoff is a journeyman matman, with big league baseball and college football background. He works hard and is not above unleashing a flying tackle of some devastation. He has never been beaten in Washington. Strange enough, Wycoff is said to be the more conservative of tonight's featured battlers. DeGlane is not above a nice right to the nose.

Joe Malcewicz, an old-tme matman who seems just as good as the Bowser champion, also is on the card tonight. He meets Jake Patterson, billed as the "Utica Panther," and although panthers have never been known to inhabit Utica, Patterson's 220 pounds and football experience make him dangerous.

The following matmen have been engaged for 30-minute exhibitions: Danny Winters vs. Pat O'Hara; August Benkert vs. Joe Cook, and Louis Allaire vs. Bull Garnon.

Bus transportation will be furnished street car customers from the end of the line to the arena. Ladies will be charged full price.

Cards' Rally in 9th Beats Dodgers, 7-6

Four Successive Hits Off Quinn, Relief Hurler, Win Game.

St. Louis, May 9 (A.P.).—Pounding the offerings of the veteran Jack Quinn for four successive hits after one was out in the ninth inning, the Cardinals pushed across three runs to nose out Brooklyn, 7 to 6, in today's opener.

Sparky Adams' triple, his third hit of the game, scored a pair to tie the count and then, after two intentional passes, Jimmy Collins came through with a single to score Adams with the winning run. It also was Collins' third safety.

Up to the time of their big rally the champions were behind all the way and it appeared the Dodgers would break their three-game losing streak. Pecking away at Flint Rhem, the invaders had piled up a 6-to-3 lead going into the last of the eighth and, with Watson Clark pitching fine ball, looked like the winners. But Clark gave way to Quinn when the Cards threatened in their half of the eighth and the veteran couldn't hold his lead.

ReynoldsNow Tops League In Hitting

Fischer Faces Indians Today; Harder Is Likely Foe.

CARL REYNOLDS, by rapping out three hits in four times at bat yesterday, one of them a home run, took the lead among the hitters of the American League with a mark of .420. Reynolds' bat has been a feature of the Nats' offense all season.

Reynolds, in 19 games and 81 times at bat, has hit safely 34 times. Seven doubles, two singles and two home runs are among his extra-base blows. He has scored thirteen runs and batted in fifteen of his teammates.

Manager Peckinpaugh's Indians will be called upon to face another 1931 mount 'enigma this afternoon when Carl Fischer tries to give an encore of Lloyd Brown's victory of yesterday. Both of these young southpaws were saved for the Tribe series. Brown, who beat them four times last year in four starts, yesterday picked up where he left off last year, while Fischer, who won four times from the Clevelanders while losing but one decision, hopes to give them another dose of the same medicine today. It is Mel Harder's turn to fling for the aliens.

Sammy West, who had hit safely in his previous eighteen games, saw his streak snapped yesterday when he failed to deliver in three official trips to the tee.

Because Moe Berg had been fielding and hitting well, Manager Walter Johnson started him behind the plate in Roy Spencer's place yesterday. In the seventh, however, when Moe was due up with two on and one down, Johnson decided to call on Sam Rice, who had come through in a pinch his last two times. Manager Peckinpaugh immediately ordered Ferrell to walk Rice, filling the bases.

Reynolds beat out a perfect bunt in the second and carried on to second when Sewell tossed over Morgan's head when he did not have a chance to nip the runner.

Bluege cut over in front of Cronin for Morgan's hot grasser in the fourth. The ball got by him, but the shortstop snared it with his gloved hand and made the killing at first with a rifle peg.

It looked as though Vosmik should have caught Judge's single in the fifth, but he stopped and took the looper on first hop.

Brown made a nobby gloved-hand stop of Porter's hot bounder opening the sixth.

Kamm was lucky in holding on to Manush's liner in the home sixth. He made a stab for the drive and the ball stuck in the webbing of his glove.

Brown made a nice try to nip Morgan on his topped roller opening the sixth. Had he not slipped while turning to make the throw, he would have nailed the runner. The play at first was close at that.

When Reynolds singled opening the home seventh, it was only the third Washington safety, the right-fielder having gotten one of the other two in the second.

Brown retired the Tribe on three pitched balls in the eighth.

BRAVES WIN FROM BUCS IN 12TH

Knothe's Long Single Scores Two to End Game, 6 to 5.

PITTSBURGH, May 9 (A.P.).—Two runners crossed the plate when Fritz Knothe whacked a long single through the gray mists in the twelfth inning today and the Boston Braves took the first game of the series from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 5.

A short time later the same peppy third baseman ended the game by throwing out Traynor after the Bucs had scored a run and had filled the bases.

"Ole Tom" Zachary to Rescue.

"Huck" Betts opposed Larry French at the start, but Betts was hit hard and Frankhouse was called from the bull pen in the sixth. The latter hurled brilliantly up to the twelfth, when he was removed for the veteran Tom Zachary, who pitched to only one man. Cantwell finished the game.

French hurled a steady game, but his support was poor in spots.

The Braves were outhit, 10 to 12, but for the most part they made their safeties count.

Maranville started the rally that won with a single. Hargrave hit for two bases and Knothe slashed out his third hit of the afternoon to register the winning runs.

BOLEY GIVEN RELEASE BY MACKS

Veteran Shortstop, Slowed up Afield, Now Free Agent.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9 (A.P.).—John P. Bolensky, better known to the baseball world as "Joe" and "Jack" Boley, for six years shortstop on the Philadelphia Athletics team, today was given his unconditional release.

Boley, who came to the Athletics from Baltimore in the spring of 1927, was replaced by Dib Williams in midseason last year and was released to the Cleveland Club during the winter. Cleveland turned him back to the A's during the spring training season at Fort Myers, Fla.

In the exhibition games Boley appeared to be a rejuvenated infielder, but three weeks ago he aggravated an old injury when he wrenched his shoulder and this brought about his release.

Free to Sign With Any Team.

Although Boley is not a ten-year man in major league circles, his release gives him an opportunity to become a minor league manager or sign with any team he chooses.

Learning his baseball on the dumpy, rock-strewn diamonds of the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania, Boley is reputed to have cost the A's $100,000 and along with Earnshaw was one of the last players to bring high prices.

Lombardi Again Stars As Reds Defeat Phils

Cincinnati, May 9 (A.P.).—A ninth inning rally gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4 to 3 victory today in the season's first tussle with the Phillies. It was Cincinnati's fifth straight victory. Making it notable again was Ernest Lombardi, ball-crashing catcher, who hit a triple and a home run. Until the ninth, he and Chick Hafey, with two each, had recorded all Cincinnati's hits.

Their triples in the second helped the Reds to two runs. Lombardi's homer on the first ball pitched to him in the seventh, put the Reds ahead. Lee's homer in the first half of the ninth evened matters and it took Gilbert's single after Herman's double, Lombardi's walk, and Hafey's bunt to end the game.

Levey Wields Potent Bat Due to Change in Stance

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, May 9 (A.P.).—Jim Levey, former Marine football star, now shortstop for the St. Louis Browns, qualifies as perhaps the happiest ball player in the big leagues today.

Like the familiar figure in the patent medicine testimonial, Levey's batting average last season was all run down, puny, suffering from almost every known variety of ailment. It lapsed to .209 at the season's close.

Then, this spring, Manager Bill Killefer prescribed a major operation. He jerked the speedy shortstopper's right-hand batting stance and installed him on the opposite side of the plate. It was an emergency measure, designed either to "kill or cure." The result is written in the records.

Today the Levey average is one of the healthiest in the American League. In 24 games Levey collected 32 hits, including plenty of extra-basers, for an average of .348. He made only 104 bingles in 139 contests last season. Only two players in the league, Porter and Averill, of the Indians, had made more hits through yesterday's games.

"It's the greatest thing that ever happened to me," he testified today. "Here I'd been going along for years thinking I couldn't hit, being just an ordinary ball player. Then Mr. Killefer told me to bat left-handed, and look what's happened? Boy, I can sock that ball."

The sudden discovery he can hit has the former marine so pepped up he refuses to welcome a day of rest. He was in high spirits today until word drifted through the lobby they had called off the Browns' opening tilt with the Yankees. His face dropped.

"They're quick on the trigger in this town, aren't they?" He looked out a window. "Doesn't look bad enough to call off a game."

Sure enough, you could see clear across the street through the mist and it scarcely was cold enough to require an overcoat if you kept walking fast.

Slugging Outfielder Figures in All Runs Off Tribe's Pitching Ace, Hitting Circuit Clout With Cronin on Base.

Brown Shows Return to Top Form as Nats Increase League Lead; Scatters Four Safeties in Different Innings.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

PITCHER LLOYD BROWN and Outfielder Carl Reynolds were the outstanding heroes at Griffith Stadium yesterday when the Nationals defeated the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 0, for their eleventh victory in their last thirteen starts. Brown not only held the heavy-hitting visitors to four scattered hits, but was credited with driving home the Nats' first run, while all Reynolds did was to make a run-robbing catch in the first, to pole out half of the natives' hits, and to remove any doubt about the outcome of the game when he crashed out a homer with Joe Cronin on the sacks in the eighth. The triumph increased the Nationals' lead in the race to three full games.

Cantonwine Gets Chance at Szabo

Earns Place in Feature on Mat Card at Auditorium on Thursday.

Howard Cantonwine, the educated rassler, is expected to take his first big stride into the consciousness of local mat patrons Thursday night when he meets Sandor Szabo at the Washington Auditorium in the feature bout of Prof. Joe Turner's weekly growl festival.

A victory over Szabo, and this seems to be in the wind, would yank Cantonwine out of the "preliminary boy" doldrums in which he now operates. Cantonwine, who graduated from Iowa, is a first-rate matman. He will outweigh Szabo by about 20 pounds.

Others on the bill are Fritz Kley and Mike Romano, George Calza and Frank Speer, Doc Wilson and George McLeod, and a return engagement between George Hagan and Alex Aberg.

Ladies will be admitted free, if they can produce escorts. First leer at 8:30 o'clock.

MATMAN DIES OF INFECTION

Boston, May 9 (A.P.).—Dimitri Demetroff, 37, a professional wrestler who contracted blood poisoning from a mat injury several months ago, died today. A week ago his left leg was amputated in an attempt to stem the spread of the poison.

Reynolds' three hits in four times at bat yesterday enabled him to jump into the league batting leadership, bringing his average to .420, and topping Jimmy Foxx, of the A's, who idled, by a single point.

The Nationals seem to specialize in beating the league's best pitchers this season and Wesley Ferrell's name yesterday was added to the list, which already included, among others, those of Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw and Rube Walberg (twice each), Charley Ruffing, Herb Pennock, Ted Lyons, Danny MacFayden and Jack Russell. The Cleveland mound ace yielded but half a dozen safeties, but two were placed in as many different rounds, each of which netted a score or more.

Pitchers in Air-Tight Duel.

It was an air-tight pitching duel between Brown and Ferrell and the gallery of about 4,000 was kept on the anxious seat almost until the very end. The Nationals did not break the ice until the seventh and this one run did not look very big in these days of "big" innings. Brown breezed through the last two innings, however, and had a three-run lead going into the ninth, thanks to Messrs. Cronin and Reynolds coming through after two were dead in the previous frame.

So effective was Brown that only two Indians got as far as third base and only two others reached second. The southpaw walked three during the game, but these lapses hurt him none in view of the fact that he kept any two of the four Cleveland hits from being clustered in the same frame.

The Nationals had been able to get but one man to second, and that because of an error, until their scoring frame, and had knicked Ferrell's slants for but two hits. Then along came Reynolds to start a minor splurge in the "lucky" inning. He opened with a single to left and advanced on Judge's single off Ferrell's knee. After Bluege advanced both runners on a neat sacrifice, Manager Johnson decided to give Sam Rice a chance to come through in a pinch for the third successive time. To do this, he had to yank Moe Berg, whose timely bingles had decided four games this season.

Rice Is Walked, Filling The Bases.

Peckinpaugh immediately ordered Ferrell to fill the bases by walking Rice, thus putting it up to Brown. He missed getting a single by a narrow margin, Cissell chasing over behind Morgan to make a nice stop of a hot grasser. It was turned into an out at first, but enabled Reynolds to score and the other base runners to move up. This put it up to Myer, but he popped to Kamm.

Two were out when Cronin singled in the eighth and it was here that Reynolds made things safe for democracy by crashing his homer to the left of the score board, his sprinting ability enabling him to complete the circuit with ease.

The Indians started like they meant business when Cissell led off with a two-base knock down the left-field foul line. Porter popped to Myer and Averill moved the runner to third on a roller and it looked as though

SLAVE SHIP LAME AFTER DEFEATING PREAKNESS ASPIRANTS

Jeffords Colt Wins Easily At Pimlico

Open Hearth Second, Trailed by Barcelona Pete.

By WALTER HAIGHT
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 9.—Grandpap Man o' War has reason to feel proud of his daughter's son, Slave Ship. This colt, as black as the hearts of the Lindbergh kidnapers, gave the Preakness dope a severe jolt when he outclassed a field of five good 3-year-olds in the Woodberry, the day's feature contest, staged over the mile and one-sixteenth course.

Slave Ship, mama'd by Lightship and papa'd by Black Toney, ran a race in the slop and mud that would be hard to beat in The Preakness, for which he is eligible. Although the time was nothing to be excited about, the manner in which Slave Ship went about the business of winning the race earned a host of backers for Saturday's classic.

But Slave Ship will not get to the Preakness. The colt, which was not raced last year due to ailments, appeared to be sore in his left front leg as they led him back to the barn. Trainer Preston Burch was noticeably concerned as he looked over his charge after the race.

Fans Make Slave Ship Favorite.

Open Hearth, from the Labret interests, was second in the test and Barcelona Pete third.

Despite the fact that Slave Ship had only been to the races once and in a maiden affair, the 10,000 who braved the threatening and chilly weather to witness the card installed the big black colt the favorite.

Slave Ship broke in fourth place, but Hanford had the colt on top passing the paddock gate and he swung to the turn with Proteus close up. Westy Junior was third, with Open Hearth and Barcelona Pete far back. Proteus gave up the chase on the trip up the backstretch and Westy Junior took the job. This one also failed to out down Slave Ship's lead.

At the far turn, Slave Ship, still unurged, drew away to a four-length advantage. Open Hearth and Barcelona Pete, the stretch runners, began moving up to take their crack but Hanford only had to sit still and go through the formality of passing the judges' stand.

There was a convention of judges and jockeys following the sixth, in which Scuttle won by two and a half lengths from Major Lee. The latter crossed the field on the far turn and interfered with several horses. The judges ordered Major Lee's number removed and placed Air King second and Rehoboth third. Jockey H. Callahan, who had the mount on the disqualified horse, was set down for the remainder of the meeting.

Muskogee, owned and operated by John Stokey, scored at his specialty, steeplechasing, in the first race, defeating a field of nine over the two-mile and thirteen-jump course. My Care, from the William Garth holdings, was second, with Autumn Bells third. Jockey M. Moals kept Muskogee off the pace for most of the distance and two jumps from the finish My Care looked very much like a winning horse. Sun Eclipse lost his rider at the twelfth fence and My Care moved away. But the ultimate place horse took the last brush at an angle and had to make a circle for the finish slot. Muskogee, coming straight, saved ground on the run for the wire and took the race by a half length.

Indiantown Shows Way To Juveniles.

Indiantown defeated the field of juveniles which sought the Maryland's Own Purse in the second race. Among others, Indiantown took into the well-known camp Rustic Cuba, a long shot which was second, and Town Square, which was third. Indiantown was rushed to the front and rushed thereafter, leaving the principal battling for the place award.

Sonsy provided a laugh for the crowd when she tossed her rider at the barrier and made a circle of the track the wrong way.

Huraway left the maiden ranks with an impressive race in the third event. Took the lead at the far turn and coasted home ahead of Dark Hope, the good thing, which had a fight for place with Black Dreams.

A thrilling finish marked the fourth race, dubbed the Guilford, with Precious Dollar, the favorite, scoring by a head over Marion T., a field horse. Jesting was third. The principal running was between the top two and they were teamed up almost all the way.

Hinkel Wins Berth On Penn Frosh Relay

Paul Hinkel, former Central track man and half back, has won his position as anchor man on the freshman mile relay at the University of Pennsylvania. He is also a member of the school's sprinting team.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDIANTOWN, $4.30, $2.70, $2.60; RUSTIC CUBA, $112.40, $37.80; TOWN SQUARE, $12.20.

INDIANTOWN, at home in the going, raced SONSY into submission in the first half mile, saved ground and responded gamely when forced to a drive to withstand RUSTIC CUBA. Latter worked her way up on the outside and closed stoutly in the stretch run. TOWN SQUARE, hard ridden the entire trip, lost ground entering the home stretch, but finished willingly under stiff pressure. SERENABIT, on the outside and close to the pacemakers early, tired in the final drive. SONSY cantered off a mile after unloading her rider while at the barrier. She showed good speed for a half mile and tired thereafter. FAIR CLARK went evenly. CHISEL was unable to threaten the leaders. TRUE SENTIMENT was never dangerous.

THIRD RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,300. The Reisterstown (first division). For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:12½. Winner, R. H. New's b. c. (3), by Wayrood—Hurakan. Trained by W. G. Wilson. Value to winner, $900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURAWAY, $7.10, $3.30, $2.80; DARK HOPE, $4.50, $4.30; BLACK DREAMS, $6.20.

HURAWAY, forwardly placed, wore BLACK DREAMS down midway of the far turn, secured an easy lead and then held sway through the final stages. DARK HOPE followed close to the leaders while racing on the outside, closed stoutly, but could not menace the winner. BLACK DREAMS raced FLUCKY GIRL into defeat in the first half mile, raved ground, but was unable to stay when put to a drive. HIGH SOCKS was unable to improve his position in the final drive after swinging wide into the home stretch. JACK PULPIT closed stoutly from a slow beginning. MISCALCULATE was held safely. LUCKY GIRL stopped early.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. The Guilford. For 2-year-olds. Start poor from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:42½. Off at 3:47. Winner, C. T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRECIOUS DOLLAR, $6.00, $4.00, $2.70; MARION T. (field), $8.30, $4.10; JESTING, $3.00.

PRECIOUS DOLLAR, away in the first flight and racing in close attendance of MARION T., responded stoutly under strong pressure when straightened into the home stretch and, in a game finish, was up in the concluding strides. MARION T. responded good speed in the early running and saving ground held on stoutly after being closely pressed for the entire trip. JESTING, away in a tangle, came to the outside from a slow beginning and closed full of run. BUN D., well placed, was unable to improve his position GALLIC made a strong effort after reaching a forward position, but was not good enough. LAKNITE had early speed. CONQUEST tired. CITIZENSHIP, JESTING and DANDELION were away very slowly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; allowances. The Woodberry. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:19. Winner, W. M. SLAVE SHIP outran his field going to the first turn, was steadied along in front until reaching the far turn, opened up at will and was taken in hand through the stretch run. OPEN HEARTH, slower than usual to reach his best stride, went to the outside when moving into contention, made a stout effort when straightened into the home stretch, but was held perfectly safe in the final furlong. BARCELONA PETE raced evenly around and was outrun. WESTY JUNIOR went well for a half mile. PARAMOUR ground and was outrun. He refused to bear out until straightened on the back stretch. He raced well for six furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,300. The Reisterstown (second division). For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:50½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCUTTLE, $5.80, $3.90, $3.10; AIR KING, $7.00, $5.60; REHOBOTH, $5.70.

SCUTTLE, avoiding interference going to the first turn, slipped through on the inside of DANNY BOY midway of the back stretch, swung to the outside of the pacemakers when moving up and, taking an easy lead at the stretch turn, drew out steadily. MAJOR LEE piled up his field going to the first turn, opened up a safe lead in the first five furlongs, but was unable to withstand the winner's effort in the final drive. He was disqualified for crossing his field. AIR KING, crowded back and a trifler in the early racing, colsed gamely when securing racing room. REHOBOTH raced well all the way. DANNY BOY tired early. BERET, LAURA GAL and BRIGHEEN suffered from much buffeting at the first turn and were knocked out of contention.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. The Bowling Brook. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:34½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANUBIS, $3.70, $3.10, $2.50; PORGIE, $11.10, $7.60; BLAZE WHITE, $5.00.

ANURIS rushed hard to take command in the opening furlong, continued strongly when HAGERSTOWN was rushed into command midway of the turn, responded to punishment and was under strong pressure to outlast PORGIE. Latter, going in his best form and a strong factor, came with good speed nearing the finish. BLAZE WHITE, far out of contention early, circled his field and finished fastest of all. HAGERSTOWN was made too much use of racing with the winner and tired in the final furlong. MUD showed a good test throughout. SPUNKY went well. PRIMLIN had good early speed. ALLANAH was outrun. LAMPOON lacked speed.

AUROR

ARMLESS GOLFER IN REMARKABLE ROUND AT KENWOOD

96 Golf Score Is Credited McAuliffe

With Houghton Beats McCallum and Norton.

Miss Faunce Leads Star Cup Field With 86.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE most remarkable exhibition of golf ever seen in Washington, with no exception whatever, was witnessed yesterday afternoon on the course of the Kenwood Club. Thomas McAuliffe, who lost both his arms in a railroad accident in 1901, and who has not even a pair of stumps to show where his arms were attached to his body, played in a four-ball match of eighteen holes, negotiating the round in 96, 48 strokes each way.

Before the match, an outfit of movie operators took pictures of this unusual golfer. They posed him as with one of his feet he stepped on a driver lying on the ground and swung the handle so that the grip rested between his throat and his neck. Then they caught him making a drive of 150 yards or more from the first tee, his head bent over and his club propelled with considerable force by the muscles of his throat and neck.

Makes Normal Golfers Envious.

Next they photographed his approach shots when, with a mashie in apparently a most uncomfortable position, and his head and body bent sidewise, he played accurately from a distance of 30 or 40 yards to the green. Finally, they pictured him playing with a niblick out of a sand trap and landing the ball on the green not very far from the cup. And this, it is worth while to remember, without the use of hands or arms. In fact, many experienced golfers who watched the remarkable performance from a view-point near the green, seemed inclined to swear off golf for the rest of their lives.

McAuliffe played with A. L. Houghton, the Kenwood golf professional, against Walter R. McCallum and Earl D. Norton, the latter a one-legged veteran of the World War. Norton, traveling around the course on crutches and standing on one leg as he made his shots, was almost as picturesque a figure as McAuliffe, for he has more than 50 pieces of shell still in his body. More than this, he is carried on the rolls of the War Department with a death certificate showing that he was killed in battle and his mother holds a posthumous decoration given her when it was apparently certain that her son was dead.

McAuliffe Never Off Fairway.

McAuliffe's round was all the more remarkable because he was never once off the fairway, was never in a trap and not once did he take more than two putts on any green. Of course, with Houghton's help, he was on the winning side of the match for Houghton's card was only 72, while Norton had a 97 and McCallum's card totaled 80. When a placed shot was necessary, McAuliffe never failed to send his ball in the required direction. As an example of what an armless golfer can do, his card is given as follows:

Out..... 6 7 5 5 6 4 5 4 6—48
In..... 4 5 6 6 7 6 5 5 4 6—48—96

In the tournament for the Star Cup for women, played yesterday on the course of the Kenwood Club, Miss Winifred Faunce, of the Manor Club, led the field with a low gross score of 44—44—88. As the trophy will be won by the low net player for 36 holes, the leader in low net for the first eighteen holes yesterday was Mrs. C. P. Medley, of the Kenwood Club, whose gross of 95, less 18, gave her a net 77. The next lowest net was made by Mrs. J. A. Marr, Columbia, 97—16—81. Thirteen players had low gross scores under 100, as follows:

Miss Winifred Faunce, Manor, 88; Mrs. Everett Eynon, Columbia, 91; Miss Susan Hacker, Chevy Chase, 93; Mrs. Y. E. Booker, Washington, 94; Miss Virginia Pope, Kenwood, 95; Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, Congressional, 95; Mrs. Ora Emge, Beaver Dam, 96; Mrs. O. Cammon, Chevy Chase, 96; Miss Virginia Williams, Congressional, 97; Mrs. J. A. Marr, Columbia, 97; Mrs. McCook Knox, Chevy Chase, 97; Mrs. L. W. Hedrick, Army-Navy, 99.

Although Mrs. Medley, with 77, and Mrs. Marr, with 81, lead the low net players with Miss Faunce, 88—6—82, tieing for third place with Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, Congressional, 95—13—82, there are nine other players with net scores of 85 and under, as follows:

Mrs. McCook Knox, 97—14—83; Mrs. Booker, 94—10—84; Miss Pope, 95—11—84; Mrs. Cameron, 96—12—84; Mrs. Eynon, 91—6—85; Miss Williams, 97—12—85; Miss Florence Scott Manor, 101—16—85; Mrs. C. W. Wheeler, 101—16—85; Miss Bertha Israel, Woodmont, 103—18—85.

U. S. Davis Cup Team On Scene of Match

New Orleans, May 9 (U.P.).—Four bright-faced American youths, representing the cream of American tennis players, arrived tonight and expressed confidence of a United States victory in this country's Davis Cup matches with Mexico at the New Orle Country Club Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The quartet was composed of Ellsworth Vines, jr., of Pasadena, Calif.; Frank X. Shields, of New York City; Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia. They were accompanied by nonplaying Capt. Bernon Prentice and will begin workouts under his direction.

VA. SCHOOLS SEEK GOLF CROWN

Tourney Listed Saturday at Woodberry Forest.

WOODBERRY FOREST, Va., May 9.—Entries in the second annual interscholastic golf tournament for Virginia school boys, which will take place at Woodberry Forest on May 14, have come in from 18 institutions, 10 of them public high schools and eight private preparatory schools. It is believed that at least three more schools will enroll contestants before May 11, the closing date for entries.

John Marshall High School (Richmond), Petersburg High School, Maury High School (Norfolk), Hampton High School, Woodrow Wilson High School (Portsmouth), Washington-Lee High School (Arlington County), Lane High School (Charlottesville), R. E. Lee High School (Staunton), Covington High School, and Altavista High School (Campbell County) are the public schools that will send contestants to the tournament. The private schools competing are Augusta Military Academy, Staunton Military Academy, Virginia Episcopal School, Danville Military Academy, McGuire's School, St. Christopher's School, Christchurch School and Woodberry Forest.

1931 Champ May Not Defend.

Buddy Clement, of the Jefferson High School, Roanoke, who became Virginia interscholastic champion by winning the tournament last year, may not compete this spring. This leaves Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, as the outstanding candidate for individual honors in the "senior division." He, however, will have plenty of competition. The leading candidate for honors in the "junior division" (boys under 16) undoubtedly is A. B. Connor, of Hampton High School. But Connor will have formidable foes in Dave Ewell, jr., of Marshall High School; Tommy Murrell, of Woodberry, and a half dozen other youngsters.

Last year the team trophy was won by Woodberry Forest, represented by Ford and Monsted. But Woodberry will not have so strong a pair in the field this year. It is probable that the best teams this year will come from Norfolk, Portsmouth and Staunton. If the Jefferson High School of Richmond should send Bobby Reigel and Tom Howell, it is believed that that combination would be hard to beat.

A driving contest for distance and direction will be held at 4:30 on Friday, the 13th. Each contestant will play 36 holes on the following day. Medal scores for the day's play will determine the winners. The team turning the gross score for the 36 holes will be declared championship pair.

Sharkey Picks Camp; Champ Is Solicitous

Orangeburg N. Y., May 9 (U.P.).—Jack Sharkey has beaten Max Shmeling to the punch—in establishing his training camp. When the citizens of Orangeburg arose today they discovered that the temperamental Boston gob had been smuggled into Gus Wilson's camp here last night.

"I'll beat that Dutchman at everything," Sharkey said. "Even into training camp"

New York, May 9 (U.P.).—Max Schmeling, world heavyweight champion, was surprised when he learned today that Jack Sharkey had arrived at Gus Wilson's training camp.

The champion explained that he was not concerned with anything his challenger might do, but that he hoped Sharkey would not worry himself into a nervous breakdown.

"I think he must be nervous already," Schmeling said, "or why should he act so funny like this?"

CENTRAL AND TECH PLAY TODAY

Mt. Pleasant Team Choice to Cop; Has Title-Tie Chance.

THOSE old rivals of high school athletics, Tech and Central, will meet on the baseball diamond at Eastern High today at 3:30 o'clock, but tradition is one of the few inherent interests in the game, for Central should have no trouble in disposing of the McKinley crew.

A victory for Central will wind up its series endeavors with a percentage of three wins out of four. This would give it a first place tie with Eastern if Western is able to bump the champions off next Tuesday in the final game of the series. Tech has yet to win a game in three starts and, with Central's fine pitching and hitting prowess looming today, there is little chance that it will be able to break its losing streak.

Emmett Buscher is expected to be Jack Ray's pitching selection today, although the Central coach has just as good a bet in Jack De Bettencourt. Eddie Turner probably will have to pitch for Tech again, since Tech political interests have ruled out Everett Russell, the school's best ball player, and one of the best pitchers in the high school business here.

Tickets for "C" Club Meet on Sale Today

Tickets for the big Central High "C" Club track meet, to be held May 20 with a huge entry list, will go on sale today in the high schools and at Spaldings. A special rate of 25 cents will be offered high school students. General admission will be 50 cents.

ROWING TEST FACED BY HARVARD

Annapolis Regatta to Show Crimson's Strength.

NEW YORK, May 9 (A.P.).—Rowing enthusiasts in the East turn their eyes toward Annapolis this week to see just how good is the 1932 Harvard crew.

That will be the main interest in the quadrangular regatta among John Harvard, Navy, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts Tech. All have been defeated this year except the Crimson, and if Harvard is to be given serious consideration as an Olympic prospect it will have to win more easily than it did against Massachusetts Tech in its only previous regatta this year. The Crimson boatload was ragged in that appearance.

Cornell to Start On May 21.

One of the most formidable crews in the East, on paper—Cornell—does not take to the water competitively until May 21, when it meets Yale and Princeton in the Carnegie Cup regatta at Ithaca. Reports from Lake Cayuga say Jim Wray has another fine boatload this year and they will have to be good to defeat Yale and Princeton crews, which look to be much improved this year. Cornell won easily at Derby last year. The Cornellians had a regatta tentatively scheduled with Syracuse for this week-end, but that was called off some time ago.

Capital City Teams Swamp Secretary

Five Franchises Open in Races for District Championships.

The usual eleventh-hour rush of sandlotters endeavoring to get under the wire before the deadline on entries in the Capital City League, sponsored by The Post, sent the entry list soaring yesterday and kept the league secretary busy from early in the evening until midnight. From 5 o'clock on they came, bringing player contracts, waiting for birth certificates to be checked, and posting franchise fees. Several mild arguments, concerning the ability of several teams, arose, but ended amicably with the usual warning, "Wait until we play you in the league." There is one vacant franchise in each of the unlimited, senior and junior divisions. They will be held open until tonight. Two franchises remain to be filled in the midget division.

LURAY BOWS, 11 TO 4, TO EASTERN

Visitors, Off to 4-0 Lead, Falter After Fourth Inning.

LURAY HIGH SCHOOL'S baseball team, whose caliber no one seemed to know anything about before yesterday, threw a scare into Eastern High, at Eastern Field, before the public high champions downed the visiting squad, 11 to 4.

Luray, unveiling a splendid pitcher in Dovell and real sluggers in R. Baker and P. Campbell, advanced to 4 to 0 in the second inning, hopping on the offerings of Cecil Hale to good effect.

Lanahan Relieves Hale.

Eastern's big bats began to boom in the fifth and continued in the sixth. Joe Pusateri, with two homers, and Bill Moore, with two triples and a double, were the hitting stars. Lanahan struck out nine men.

STAMPEDE.

("I have been a cowboy and know somethng about the psychology of cattle when they stampede. But I never classed men on the mental level of a beef steer, and I am honestly puzzled when I see a hundred million people acting like a bunch of locoed cattle."—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley.)

I.

Like a bunch of locoed cattle
Rush a hundred million men,
Clamoring for something that'll
Soften up their lives again;
On the level of a beef steer,
As they look about in fright,
They go plunging in belief queer
Nothing counts but sudden flight.

II.

Is the country subjugated?
Have invaders sacked the land?
Is the Nation's strength prostrated?
Do the hills no longer stand?
Bosh! We hear no foeman's clatter—
All the trouble is that we Find life's not the simple matter
That it seemed so long to be.

III.

What's that sound of footsteps beating
In a frenzied paen of fear?
What's that sound of fearsome bleating,
And those moanings loud and clear?
Are they cattle dumb, unheeding?
No, believe it, boys, or not,
It's a race of men stampeding
From they really don't know what!

IV.

What's that flight quite mad and fearful?
Why that terror in those eyes?
Why the lack of voices cheerful?
Gosh! you never would surmise;
All the gloom and all the groaning,
All the fog and all the murk,
Can be traced to fate intoning:
"Boys, you've gotta go to work!"

V.

Easy pickings now have vanished—
Gold no longer falls from trees;
Sudden riches have been banished
As the Goofy Era flees;
And the picture changed so quickly,
After years of comfort grand,
That the boys now murmur thickly:
"This is more than we can stand!"

VI.

Drop that frightened look there, mister!
Things are not as bad as that;
Shake that crying-towel, sister,
And remember where you're at.
Times are not exactly cheering—
To admit as much we must,
But there's no excuse for fearing
That the world's about to bust.

VII.

Whazzamattah? Where's the spirit
That your stalwart forbears had?
Could they view the scene, I fear it
Wouldn't strike them as so bad;
You may sense your burdens double,
You may think you're sunk with cares,
But if YOU think YOU know trouble,
Boy, you should have gone through THEIRS!

JUST WONDERING.

"Cashier at Church"—headline. Is that a warning or a boast?

Regarding that recent radio studio incident in which a lion ran wild, Bill Richardson says he approves of the idea and will willingly finance an expedition to bring a boatload of lions to American radio studios to do their stuff.

REFLECTION

My eyes are a fright,
My eyes are a sight—
I look as though

COTTON PRICE DROPS IN LIQUIDATION DRIVE

July Contracts Slump $1, With May at 5.54; Sales in Liverpool.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Cotton was lower today with July contracts selling off to 5.64 or about $1 per bale below Saturday's closing quotations.

There was moderate selling influenced by relatively easy Liverpool cables, a favorable view of the weather news, and the heavy tone of the stock market. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest with the market steady at net declines of 17 to 20 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 4 to 6 points under scattered selling in response to easier Liverpool cables. The initial offerings appeared to be quite absorbed by trade buying and covering, but bulges of a point or two failed to hold and the market soon eased again under a continuation of the selling which seemed to come partly from Southern and local sources.

No general pressure developed, but the market worked gradually lower later in the day under scattered liquidation or realizing encouraged by the continued absence of aggressive buying coupled with disappointment over the ruling of the stock market and talk of fairly favorable coming crop progress in the South. The decline extended to 5.54 for May and 5.88 for October contracts in the late trading.

Advices from the Southwest reported a firm spot basis with Far Eastern interests among the best buyers, and there may have been a little buying here at the opening on reports that a somewhat better demand had developed in the cotton goods market here toward the close of last week.

Liverpool cables reported local liquidation and some selling on the weakness of Egyptian in that market and said that stocks of cotton goods were accumulating. Exports today 10,962, making 7,620,133 so far this season.

AMERICAN SECURITY OFFICES RENOVATED

Hundreds Visit Opening of Main Banking Chamber; History Reviewed.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Resplendent in marble, rich woodwork and bronze, colored with hundreds of floral tributes sent by the many friends of the institution, the remodeled main office of the American Security & Trust Co. was opened for public inspection yesterday and visited and admired by hundreds of persons.

In an atmosphere of dignity, spaciousness, soft-toned beauty and loftiness created by the renovated interior, the bank's highest officials, who now having ample desk space in the completely changed banking room, received many prominent guests, officials of the other banks and clients throughout the day.

The new main office is a most commendable monument to the company's nearly 43 years of stability, progress and accomplishment. It is a far call from the modest, temporary location in which the institution first opened for business at 1419 G street northwest, December 9, 1889.

Success Follows Quickly.

The instant success the company met with necessitated its removal to larger office space at 1405 G street northwest. In 1905, it completed the erection of its stately, monumental main office building at the northwest corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street northwest.

In February, 1930, it filed application for a permit to construct its worthy adjunct, the ten-story, stone American Security Building immediately adjoining the main office building on Fifteenth street and in which many of the company's departments have been located.

It has four branch offices, at Seventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, at 1140 Fifteenth street northwest, at 722 H street northeast, and at 445 Seventh street southwest. The company's original issue of capital stock, $1,250,000, was increased to $3,000,000 in 1904. In 1919, $400,000 more was added, which gave this company a larger capital than any bank or trust company in the city. It also has the largest surplus and undivided profits.

Deposits Are Increased.

Through the consummation of a merger in 1919, with the Home Savings Bank, the deposits and resources of the company were greatly increased. Its resources have grown from more than $1,230,000 in 1890 to more than $40,000,000, and its deposits from $261,000 to more than $31,000,000.

Alexander T. Britton was the first president of the company and was succeeded to that office in 1893 by the late Charles J. Bell who remained the active head of the institution for 35 years. In 1928, Mr. Bell became chairman of the board of the company and Corcoran Thom was elected to the presidency.

Besides Mr. Thom, other high officers of the company are Howard Moran, vice president; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary; Charles E. Howe, treasurer; David N. Houston, trust officer; William L. Beale, real estate officer; J. Dann Faber, auditor.

Banking Situation Improved.

The bank statements for the week ended May 4 were influenced by the recent Treasury financing. However, the Reserve System added approximately $95,000,000 to its Government security portfolio, chiefly through purchases of certificates and bills, and members' discounts were reduced by $26,000,000.

New York City member banks expanded their investments by $197,000,000 although this reflected primarily acquisition of new Government securities. There was a gain of $29,000,000 in other investments. Security loans were reduced $17,000,000, but "all other" loans, which embrace commercial transactions, rose $22,000. Net demand deposits were up $31,000,000.

Currency circulation took an emphatic upturn, but bankers pointed out that the $50,000,000 jump covered the month-end period when demands are usually larger.

Russian Trade Cut In World's Stress

Balance Average Dwindles to $146,912,000; Exports Are Also Lower.

Moscow, May 9 (A.P.).—Foreign trade figures for 1931, released today, show Soviet Russia is still feeling the squeeze of the world economic crisis.

At the end of 1931 the adverse trade balance was 293,824,000 rubles (nominally $146,912,000), as compared with an adverse balance of 151,020,000 rubles in the first six months of that year.

Exports were in greater volume than in 1930, but more than a fifth less in value because of declining prices in the world markets. The 1931 figures were 21,778,906 tons, valued at 811,210,000 rubles, as compared with the 1930 totals of 21,486,395 tons, valued at 1,083,371,000 rubles. The increase in volume was 1.3 per cent and the decrease in value 21.7 per cent.

Imports aggregated 3,564,352 tons, valued at 1,105,034,000 rubles, as compared with 2,855,900 tons, valued at 1,058,825,000 rubles in 1930. Here the depression worked to the advantage of Russia, enabling importation of larger quantities at only a slight increase in prices.

The chief exports were agricultural products, oil and timber. Imports were principally metals and machinery.

General Motors Boost Sales During April

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Sales of General Motors cars in April increased sharply over the March figures.

Total sales to dealers were 78,359 cars and trucks, compared with 59,696 in March and 154,252 in April, 1931.

April sales to American consumers aggregated 81,573 units, against 48,717 in March and 135,663 a year ago, while sales to American dealers totaled 89,029, compared with 48,383 in the previous month and 132,629 in April, 1931.

MARKET COMMENT

National City Bank—Between the alternatives of excessive risks and excessive reserves there is a border area of indeterminate width in which the policy of credit expansion may be expected to take effect.

Westheimer & Co.—Stock price movements are confined to a narrow trading groove. The week started with no very hopeful prospects concerning business statistics. These factors should be offset by any real progress toward a conservative program regarding national finances. Professional trading is likely to govern stock price movements under present conditions.

G. M-P Murphy & Co.—Now that the market has demonstrated that it can still move in two directions, speculators might revert to the policy of making moderate purchases on only acute weakness. It is quite likely that higher than present prices will be seen over the next several weeks, but improbable that gains will be steady. Quite a lot of good news appeared suddenly last week, and it is too much to expect that it will continue under present conditions. Speculative sponsorship seems still to be lacking.

Hornblower & Weeks—Insofar as the market policy at this time is concerned, we continue to feel that the extent and duration of any sustained recovery movement will depend upon the tenor of news developments from day to day and that until a definite tax program is decided upon any further extension of the advance is likely to be of an irregular character.

Munds, Winslow & Potter—With an eye solely to political expediency and with attention concentrated on the November elections, Congress has evaded constructive action on current problems and endeavored to muddle through by prescribing quack nostrums for a cancerous condition. It has played politics for the home folks, granted special favors in response to powerfully organized propaganda, and endeavored to curry popular favor by appeals to class prejudice. Its horse play in this crisis has disgusted the Nation and alarmed the outside world.

$351,661,000 Offered For $75,000,000 Bills

Secretary Mills announced yesterday that applications totaling $351,661,000 were received for the Treasury's offering of $75,000,000 in 91-day bills dated May 11.

The highest bid was 99.880, equivalent to an annual interest rate of about 0.47 per cent, and the lowest bid accepted was 99.817. The total amount of bids accepted was $76,744,000.

MARKETS CHEERFUL, DESPITE DULLNESS

Bonds and Stocks Hesitate on Trading Actively; Auto Trade Brightens.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—The bond market started the week quietly, but with a highly irregular trend. Traders and investors appeared to be waiting for further business and industrial developments before taking on any sizeable commitments.

The same time there was a somewhat more cheerful feeling regarding Washington activities on taxes and budget balancing.

The outstanding item of corporate news for the day was General Motors' report of April sales, showing sales to consumers in the United States of 81,573 cars, as increased from 48,717 for March. This manufacturer's April showing may have been helped by Ford's tardiness in production of its new models.

On the whole, however, current reports from motor circles remain mildly cheerful, with indications that the month of May will see the largest production for the industry as a whole in eight months. Nevertheless, the steel manufacturers are not getting the business expected from the automobile industry.

Steel production is estimated at the start of the week at 24 per cent of capacity, unchanged from last week.

Markets Wait on Washington.

Banking and brokerage quarters continued to look for clews as to future trends in Washington developments. The unanimous approval by the Senate finance committee of the compromise tax measure at its meeting today was viewed favorably. In banking quarters hopes were still expressed of a revival of a general nondiscriminatory sales tax, but the need for prompt balancing of the budget and consequent removal of uncertainty was still stressed above all else.

German government bonds rallied on news that the Bank for International Settlements had decided to renew for three months its share of the $90,000,000 credit to the Reichsbank, provided the other creditors do likewise.

Chain Store Sales.

Sales of seventeen chain store groups and mail order companies operating retail stores, as reported for April, aggregated $93,952,689, compared with $108,120,786 for April, 1931. For the four months' period sales of the same companies were $332,750,637, as reduced from the 1931 total of $385,706,204.

Retail Trade Slow.

Despite slight gains in consumer buying, dollar sales for April made the least satisfactory comparison with the year previous for any month in the depression period to date, says the Standard Statistics Co. Further moderate gains in totals are anticipated for the current month, but records of a year ago will not be duplicated until marked betterment in general conditions has been experienced, this authority asserts.

Textile Exports Lower.

The view in textile export quarters is that the foreign market outlook is less satisfactory than it has been in a number of years, due to credit difficulties. Average shipments this year have been running about 30 per cent less than during 1931, and at approximately one-third of the 1930 volume.

Report on Kreuger.

The protective committee headed by Grayson M.-P. Murphy, representing holders of the Kreuger & Toll Co. 5 per cent secured debentures, due 1959, has notified the holders that the securities underlying the debentures held in Sweden have been found to conform with the records of the American trustee, and that the securities appear to be genuine.

The committee states that it has been advised by Swedish counsel that the securities are so held as to be free from any levy or attachment which might be asserted against them prior to the charge created by the indenture in favor of the secured debentures.

Pan-American Petroleum.

Pan-American Petroleum & Transport class "B" common stock holds a distinguished place in the market by virtue of its further sharp rise last week to a new high level for the year. Its substantial advance over the last few weeks is due, of course, to expectations that the holders will come in for something special in connection with Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey's acquisition of its foreign properties.

The New York Stock Exchange has received notice from the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co. of a proposed change in the par value of the common and class "B" stocks from $50 to $5 a share, each present share to be exchanged for one new share. The recapitalization is in connection with the sale of the company's foreign properties to the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Woolworth of England.

P. W. Woolworth & Co., Ltd., British subsidiary of the American Woolworth Co., has declared a semi-annual dividend on the 6 per cent preferred shares for the six months ended May 31 of 3 per cent, less British income tax. The dividend is payable June 8 to stock of record May 10.

Consolidated Cigar.

The Consolidated Cigar Corporation had net profit of $244,536 for the quarter ended March 31, equal to 15 cents a share on the outstanding common stock. This compares with $478,547 or $1.04 a share in the first quarter of 1931.

European Exchanges Repeat Fight on Dollar

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—European exchanges today closed mostly at quotations that represented further advances against dollars.

French francs were off a shade on most transactions, but later steadied and finished unchanged at 3.94¼ cents for cable transfers. Sterling was up ¾ cent net. Dutch guilders were quiet. Reichmarks rallied 6 points coincident with news that the international credit had been renewed for three months.

Stocks Fluctuate Narrowly In Year's Dullest Trading

Market Waits on Issue of Washington Tax Legislation; Bonds Travel Rough Road, With Curb Inactive in Absence of Selling Pressure.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Stocks backed and filled rather aimlessly today, content to stand by and await the issue of events at Washington where the tax bill was advanced to the Senate.

In the year's dullest trading, market leaders edged up and down narrowly, easing a little in the afternoon when buying proved even lighter than offerings and closing with a minor fractional loss on the average.

Sales totaled only 636,707 shares.

Group movements were generally indistinct, although the rails looked heavy. Advance estimates of tomorrow's freight movement report, which will cover April's last week, mentioned a probable decline. Imminence of the New York Central and Union Pacific dividend meetings may also have been a factor, even though it is almost a foregone conclusion, in Wall street opinion, that the former road will take no action toward a payment. Central was off nearly a point net; there were slightly larger losses in Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe, while Baltimore & Ohio, Northern Pacific and Pennsylvania flirted with their old lows. Norfolk & Western dropped 2.

Eastman Kodak Sags.

Eastman Kodak, which likewise has a dividend session in the offing, sagged 3 to a record minimum, and American Telephone, after some forenoon firmness, fell back 1½ net. Otherwise, pivotal issues closed with small changes.

General Motors April sales report showed a more than seasonal gain over March. March was a very poor month for automobile manufacturers; May, however, has been running ahead of April, which is normally the year's best month. Seasonal performances in all industries have been thrown badly askew by this depression.

The unfilled tonnage statement of United States Steel Corporation will be made public at noon tomorrow and another decrease is rather widely looked for. Operations shaded higher toward the close of last month, but it is regarded as doubtful that new business quite came up to deliveries. The backlog usually shrinks in April; in fact, only once during the last six years was there a gain and that was a small rise in 1929. If a loss is reported it will be the thirteenth consecutive monthly decrease.

Wall street heard little comment on the French election. However, such reactions as did find expression were inclined to be favorable, on the theory that a more liberal attitude toward problems on the Lausanne conference agenda might be one of the results.

A small sag in French francs against a rising pound suggested that some funds have been transferred to London, nevertheless the trend was far from being decisive.

Foreign exchanges held a firm tone against dollars notwithstanding reports from abroad that sentiment had been helped by recent developments at Washington. The inference was that Europe's fears will best be allayed by definite completion of tasks which still lie ahead of Congress.

Bond Trading Uneven.

The bond market traveled an uneven road with some specialties under pressure and others holding a little better than even.

Altogether, it was a comparatively dull session notwithstanding the fact that sales totaled $13,455,000, par value. The aggregate was brought up substantially by the heavy selling of National Dairy products 5¼s, which showed a net loss of 4 points. There was nothing in the day's news to explain this decline.

In the matter of averages, 60 principal loans lost two-tenths of a point. The 20 selected industrials dropped three-tenths for another 1932 low, the same number of rails gave up six-tenths and 20 utilities closed unchanged.

United States Government bonds generally were steady, although most of them ended with fractional declines. The easing of this list was attributed partly to profit taking.

Rails Are Weakest.

The rails were the weakest members of the listed loans family. Heaviest declines were confined to the convertible and secondary issues. Among the principal losers were some liens of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Chicago & Western Indiana, Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern and Union Pacific. Frisco 4½s of 1978, registered, slumped 29 points. Advances were recorded, however, by Denver & Rio Grande 5s and consolidated 4s, Burlington 4½s, Chicago & Alton 3½s, Chesapeake Corporation 5s, Pennsylvania General 4½s and Wabash first 5s.

Communications company loans kept the utilities down. Weakness was shown by bonds of International Telephone, Postal Telegraph and Western Union. Power & Light Corporation liens improved moderately. Softness was exhibited by mortgages of Armour & Co., Chile Copper, National Steel, Phillips Petroleum, Shell Pipe Line, Shell Union Oil and United Drug.

French bonds were little disturbed by the Sunday election in France, most of them holding steady. The Germans advanced, as did some of the Argentines, Australians, Chileans, Italians, Norwegians and Polish. Outside of the government 6½s, Japanese loans eased.

Curb Is Inactive.

The Curb was inactive today, and in the absence of selling pressure prices held about steady.

In view of the small turnover, approximating only 100,000 shares, traders felt that recent gains probably had not been fully tested, but were, nevertheless, pleasd by absence of offerings.

A few stocks worked lower. Among them was Singer Manufacturing, which, trading in ten-share lots, was off 2 points net. It did not, however, violate last week's low. Humble Oil sagged 1¾ on a single transaction toward the close. Otherwise oils were steady. Commonwealth Edison gave up a cuple of points and Duke Power sagged 10 on very light dealings, making a new bottom.

Cities Service preferred had an early sinking spell, but made full recovery, closing half a point higher. Electric Bond & Share met good support, ruling at or above Saturday's final quotation and showing a small net gain. American Superpower and United Light "A" eased nominally. The former's preferred stocks firmed.

Swift stocks improved in the late afternoon. The International company's issues, sagging slightly during the morning, eventually rallied a point net, while Swift & Co. closed ⅝ higher. National Dairy "A" preferred duplicated its year's high at 101. The issue is inactive.

One of the thin spots was Northern Indiana Public Service 7 per cent preferred, which tumbled 10 points in one of its infrequent appearances on the tape.

Utility circles hear that negotiations for financing completion of the Abitibi Canyon power development of the Ontario Power Service Corporation, subsidiary of the Abitibi Power & Paper Co., in time for delivery of power this fall have reached an advanced stage, and an announcement is expected shortly.

Brokers report a slightly more favorable speculative sentiment toward the motor stocks, due to the moderate upturn in new car sales in April.

Frederick Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co., said today that orders for accounting machines received by the company in the first week in May were substantially ahead of the like 1931 period.

Warner Quinlan Co. had first quarter net loss of $414,120, against loss of $20,916 in the same period of 1931.

Articles of incorporation were filed today in Delaware for the Pan-American Foreign Corporation, the corporate medium through which the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey will take over the foreign properties of the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co. in the deal consummated last week. The authorized capital of the new corporation consists of 1,100,000 shares of class "A" and 3,000,000 shares of class "B" stock, both of $1 par.

The Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation reports for the year ended December 31, 1931, net profit of $1,663,451 after all charges, equal to 4 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with $2,001,292, or 9 cents a share, in 1930.

Drug, Inc., reports for the quarter ended May 31 net profit of $4,561,573, after interest, speculation, Federal taxes and other charges, equal to $1.30 a share on the company's capital stock. This compared with net profit of $5,384,146, or $1.54 a share, in the first quarter of 1931.

Marmon Motor Car Co reports for the year ended February 29 net loss of $3,702,640 after extraordinary charges and inventory adjustments. This compared with a net loss of $3,690,707 in the preceding fiscal year.

The report of the National Fuel Gas Co. for the year ended December 31, 1931, shows consolidated net profit of $4,452,241, equal to $1.17 a share, compared with $6,111,639, or $1.60 a share, in 1930.

EXTENSION GRANTED ON GERMAN CREDITS

World Bank Expected to Pay 6 Per Cent Dividends; Deposits Increase.

Basel, Switzerland, May 9 (A.P.).—Three months' extension was granted today by the Bank of International Settlements of its one-fourth share in the $90,000,000 credit granted to Germany in conjunction with the Banks of France and England and the American Federal Reserve. Payment was due on June 4.

Tomorrow will be the day of the second annual meetng of the bank. It was predicted that it would declare a 6 per cent dividend, and there were reports that in a possible general revision of the German reparations schedules the directors might accept a figure between $96,000,000 and $144,000,000.

Even in the financial troubles of the past year, the bank's earnings exceeded the $2,145,000 profit earned in its first year. A statement presented today showed an increase in deposits for the month of April from 608,000,000 Swiss francs to 620,000,000. Total deposits at the end of 1931 were 463,000,000 francs.

Reserve Bank Expected To Renew Berlin Credit

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—While it was generally expected in Wall street financial circles that the Federal Reserve Bank would follow the lead of the Bank of International Settlements and extend its portion of the $90,000,000 loan to the Reichsbank, it was not thought any formal action would be taken by the American institution until shortly before June 4, when the German credit expires. The Reserve authorities had no announcement to make today.

Although the cooperation of the Federal Reserve was more or less taken for granted, there was some mild speculation among bankers as to whether the Bank of France might interpose some conditions for the renewal of its part of the Reichsbank credit.

It was recalled that on the occasion of the previous renewal, the Reichsbank paid $2,500,000 to each of the creditors, and the bankers, in turn, reduced the rate of interest charged the German bank to 6 per cent. It is not believed at this time, however, that the Reichsbank will offer any part payment.

C. & S. Corp. Free Of All Bank Loans

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Reviewing the operations of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation in 1931 in the pamphlet report issued today, B. C. Cobb, chairman of the board, and T. W. Martin, president, state that neither the corporation nor any of its subsidiaries has any bank loans or floating indebtedness except current bills.

As previously reported, net income for 1931, after all charges, was $13,274,115, or approximately 40 cents a share on the common stock outstanding.

The report shows that the company's sales of electricity fell to 4,495,095,702 kilowatt hours in 1931 from 4,722,466,527 in 1930. Gas sales were down moderately and revenue passengers carried on the company's transportation properties totaled 187,576,388, against 229,843,159 in 1930.

The company spent $38,378,380 in 1931 for additions and improvements, approximately 78 per cent for the electric department.

STILL CHIEF

who was elected yesterday to his third term as president of the New York Stock Exchange.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—The New York Stock Exchange held its annual election today and returned to office Richard Whitney as president, to serve a third one-year term.

The stewardship of the exchange has been in the hands of Mr. Whitney during what many in Wall street regard as the stormiest period in its long history.

At the time of the stock market crash in the fall of 1929 he was forced into the limelight by virtue of his position as acting head of the exchange in the absence of E. H. H. Simmons, the president, who was abroad.

Number of declines	218	170
Stocks unchanged	123	131

Stocks.

Movements were in a very narrow range, but the tone was weak. Apparently the market is awaiting a cue on positive developments in Washington on the national fiscal program. Eastman Kodak sold at a new low.

Bonds.

The Standard Statistic's average for 20 industrial bonds marked a new 1932 low. The volume was somewhat larger than last week's average day.

Curb.

Wheat.

Russian inquiry gave the bulls some leverage, but the close was ¼ cent lower to ¼ cent up.

Cotton.

Weaker Liverpool cables and Southern selling made for lower prices, but the principal factor was the hesitant stock market sentiment.

Inquiry Under Way In Soldier's Death

Multiple Neuritis Developed Following Typhoid Inoculations.

Richmond, Va., May 9 (A.P.).—Special investigation is being made into the death of Robert Earle Hawkins, 18, Richmond, private in the service company of the First Virginia Infantry, who died May 5, of multiple neuritis.

Hawkins was inoculated March 21 against typhoid fever along with some 40 other men. Health officials said today that if the inoculation is found to have been a contributing cause to the death, it will be one of the rarest cases in Virginia medical history.

The treatment in the case was not suspected of having had any ill effects until after the second inoculation, April 4. Multiple neuritis, with a number of possible causes, developed thereafter.

Reports indicated that the same bottle of vaccine was used in the treatment of nine other guardsmen, none of whom suffered ill effects.

Philadelphia Bond Issue Boosted to $20,000,000

Philadelphia, May 9 (A.P.).—Decision to increase a proposed $15,000,000 municipal bond issue to $20,000,000 and offer it for sale publicly on June 3, was made today at a three-hour conference of city officials. The bonds will be placed on the market in the amount of $100 and multiples thereof at 5 per cent interest, the highest offered on municipal bonds locally since shortly after the World War.

Differences of opinion regarding the expenditure of the money to be raised by the sale of bonds apparently had been overcome at today's meeting. The money is to be used to meet land mandamus claims, to replenish the general fund and to liquidate city contractors warrants.

Fire Burns Courthouse and Jail.

Taos, N. Mex., May 9 (A.P.).—The courthouse and jail and business buildings in the same block on the north side of the plaza were destroyed by fire here today. Members of the Taos artists' colony joined in fighting the flames. Prisoners were removed from the jail and placed in a hotel room for safekeeping.

DRYS ATTACK WETS IN SKIT AND SONG AT OBSERVANCE DINNER

Crowd Cheers Speaker as He Thunders Prohibition Must Be Enforced.

ROBINSON, OF INDIANA, CITES PERIL OF GANGS

U. S. in Beer Business Would Desecrate Flag, Senator Says.

Attacking an invisible wet parade with satirical songs, skits and oratory, 700 drys celebrated prohibition at a law observance dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night. They cheered the predictions of Senator Arthur R. Robinson, Republican, of Indiana, and other speakers that the eighteenth amendment never will be repealed.

With Associate Justice James C. McReynolds, of the United States Supreme Court, among the listeners, Senator Robinson described the prohibition issue as a conflict "between the constitutional government and an organized criminal gang."

"Prohibition must be enforced," he shouted, as cheers thundered in the ballroom, "or the gang will reign supreme."

The Indiana senator and famous dry made a strong plea for the education of boys and girls on behalf of prohibition, and spoke with regret of "the men and women who are encouraging youth in the Crusader movement."

Would Mean Saloon's Return.

Repeal of the eighteenth amendment will mean the return of the saloon "because you've got to have some place to sell the stuff," Senator Robinson affirmed. He observed that the corner saloon sold more liquor in a day than the bootlegger does in a week in the same community."

The talk of the Government going into the beer business was scorned by the senator as a desecration of the American flag. "If my country must go into business, let it be an honorable business and not the saloon business," he said.

The temperate drinker was described as the most dangerous by Dr. Richard C. Cabot, head of the social service department of Harvard University and president of the National Conference of Social Workers.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, of Georgia, declared "that the great multitude of Christian women in the United States will see that prohibition remains." She described the wet sympathizers of her sex as "mule headed cows with no horns."

Says Country Is Dry.

"The next President," she predicted, "will not be any man who says he is in favor of repealing the 18th amendment. The people of the United States are dry—don't be afraid because a few women have gone wet."

Former Gov. Henry J. Allen was was toastmaster. He observed that "one wouldn't think there was such a thing as disobedience for law before the eighteenth amendment," and then reminded his audience that there were notorious men before prohibition "who could rival men like Al Capone."

Serving of the soup course was the cue for the appearance of 30 young "crusaders in quest of the Holy Ale." They carried banners bearing the names of Smith, Wadsworth, Ritchie, LaGuardia, Bingham, Blaine, Raskob, Curran, Lusk and other avowed wets.

"What we want is whisky, what we'er after's beer," they sang, to the tune of "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

Parodies and Skits on Program.

William Shanahan and William Braithwaite, impersonating Mr. Linthicum and Mr. Beck, parodied the famous old Gallagher and Sheen act. The concluding number, sung to the tune of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," ended with a line that evoked considerable laughter—"Let Bingham Bing."

The dinner was sponsored by a committee, including Mrs. William Tilton, of Cambridge, Mass.; Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong and Mrs. Rushmore Patterson. Guests at the speakers table included: Walter Newton, one of the President's secretaries; Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations; Maj. Gen. Ben H. Puller, commandant of the Marine Corps; Amos W. Woodcock, director of the Prohibition Bureau, and Frank Gannett, publisher.

TRAVEL 1,400 MILES TO DEDICATE SHRINE

Representatives of the Texas Grand Lodge of Masons parading down Pennsylvania avenue prior to their departure for Alexandria, where they took part in the first dedicatory services at the National Masonic Memorial, which will be formally dedicated on Thursday.

PRESIDENT TO VIEW MASONIC MEMORIAL DEDICATION SERVICE

Plans Are Being Made for Ceremony in Alexandria on Thursday.

PARADE WILL PRECEDE SHOOTERS HILL FETE

Texas Grand Lodge Holds First Meeting in New National Temple.

From far-off Texas 250 Masons came yesterday to hold the first formal dedication ceremony in the amphitheater of Masonry's imposing granite monument to George Washington in historic Alexandria.

The grand lodge of Texas held a special communication in the presence of hundreds of members of the craft from other States gathered to join Thursday in the dedication ceremonies.

The George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple, on Shooters Hill, in Alexandria, erected by the Masons of the United States, will be dedicated Thursday at 1 o'clock in the presence of President Hoover, high officials of the Government and of the Masonic order in the United States.

Yesterday's observance included speeches by Louis A. Watres, of Scranton, Pa., president of the Memorial Association, and Charles H. Callahan, of Alexandria, past grand master of Masons in Virginia and father of the Memorial Temple project. Mr. Callahan described the memorial's historic surroundings.

Association Will Meet.

Following Thursday's dedication ceremonies, meetings will be held by the George Washington Masonic Memorial Association, which is responsible for the building of this $5,000,000 temple, and the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar.

Thursday night there will be a meeting of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, of which Washington was the first master, at which the Master Mason's degree will be conferred by George Washington Lodge, No. 9, of St. Louis, Mo., using the Missouri ritual.

During the progress of the dedication, bands will play, Masonic choirs will chant parts of the ritual, and the ceremonies will be broadcast.

Charles C. Carlin, of Alexandria, former representative from Virginia, discussed with President Hoover at the White House the plans for the dedication. The President will attend, arriving at the memorial by 1 o'clock.

On Reception Committee.

Mr. Carlin was accompanied by Edgar Warfield, sole survivor of the 700 Confederate soldiers who left Alexandria in 1861 to take their part in the Civil War; John H. Cowles, Leon M. Abbott and H. W. Witcover, who will constitute the presidential reception committee at the celebration.

Although parking arrangements to take care of 5,000 automobiles have been made, it is believed more than double this number will come to Alexandria, and Police Capt. John S. Arnold has requested Alexandria residents to keep their cars off the streets, as far as possible, on Thursday, to avoid unnecessary congestion of traffic. The route from Washington to the parking spaces will be kept open.

The parade will start at 9:30 a. m. Stands for the accommodation of the public have been erected on King street, along the route of the parade, and the committee on arrangements has arranged to serve box luncheons. Several church organizations also will serve luncheons on the parade route.

Elected and installed last night as grand commander of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of the District of Columbia, L. Whiting Estes, long identified with Masonic activities in Washington, became head of every York Rite of Masonry in the District.

Mr. Estes was elevated from the chair of deputy grand commander and had the unusual honor of being installed in his new office by Perry W. Weidner, grand master of the Grand Encampment of the United States. He succeeded Eugene E. Thompson, the retiring grand commander.

Other officers elected last night at the annual meeting of the Grand Commandery in the Masonic Temple were:

William H. Harrison, deputy grand commander; Roland M. Brown, grand generalissimo; Arthur M. Poynton, grand captain general; Arthur C. Shaw, grand senior warden; Maurice L. Brewton, grand junior warden; James Shera Montgomery, grand prelate; Frank E. Gibson, grand treasurer; J. Claude Keiper, grand recorder; James Graham, grand standard bearer; J. Fred Huber, grand sword bearer; J. Walter Karsner, grand warder, and Otto B. Roepke, grand captain of the guard.

Three other officers were reappointed. They were John D. McDuffie, inspector general; J. Harry Phillips, assistant inspector general, and P. Raymond Boesch, instructor general of work. Irving Hall was appointed quartermaster.

Mr. Estes, the new grand commander, has been a resident of Washington since 1888. He is widely known in business circles and is a director and vice president of the Columbia National Bank. He also is a member of the board of directors of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., and the International Finance Corporation.

Prominent in the Capital's social activities, Mr. Estes is a member of the City Club, the Columbia Country Club, the National Press Club and the Congressional Country Club.

He has been closely connected with Masonic organizations for many years. In 1930 he was elected grand high priest of the Royal Arch Masons of the District of Columbia. He was made a master Mason in Temple-Noyes Lodge, No. 32, in 1913, and was its worshipful master in 1920.

The meeting last night was a feature of the convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs, a part of the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration.

DUTY OF INDIVIDUALS IN ECONOMIC STRESS OUTLINED TO ROTARY

International Education of Youth Advocated; Held Pressing Need.

The duty of the individual to promote sounder economic relationship was the theme of an address by Canon William Thompson Elliott, vicar of Leeds, England, guest speaker at the Thirty-fourth District Rotary International Conference at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

"A Rotary Club calls for the giving up of certain personal liberties and the resuming of definite obligations toward one's self, one's business and the community. Borne down as we are today by the sheer weight of material consideration, the world-wide depression has brought forcibly to our attention the imperative need for the greater recognition of the responsibility of the individual in the promotion of returned prosperity," Canon Elliott said.

Rotarianism Called Cure.

Paul Titsworth, president of the Washington University at Chestertown, Md., and governor of the Thirty-fourth District, explained the present turmoil in politics and economics as a struggle between national egotism and cultural internationalism, which he said Rotarianism must bridge.

Teamwork Held Needed.

Activities in the relief of unemployment, school delinquency, Americanization work, and the establishment of student loan funds were reported in the field of the aims of the association. The four services of the Rotary Club are vocational, club, community and international.

Election of officers in the men's group was held at the Willard Hotel, with John Poole, past president of the International Rotary, presiding. Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, said at the election gathering that business men should meet depressed conditions through teamwork.

The women held an election session at the Mayflower Hotel, and were addressed by George Whitwell, chairman of the Washington Club convention committee. They later made a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

A reception in honor of John Nelson, of Canada, vice president of the Rotary International, was held last night at the Willard. The reception was followed by a ball.

FEDERATION OF ARTS OPENS SESSION HERE

Conforming to L'Enfant Plans Urged in Development of Washington.

The future of Washington depends on the vigilance of its citizens in conforming its construction to the plans of L'Enfant, Frederic A. Delano, president of the American Civic Association, said yesterday at the first of the three-day sessions of the twenty-third annual meeting of the American Federation of Arts at the Mayflower Hotel.

Artists, patrons of arts and officers of art institutions, attending the meeting, heard addresses by Mr. Delano and Earle S. Draper, of the American Society of Landscape Artists, on the future of Washington. Outlining the past development of the city, both men stressed the necessity of carrying out the plans of the designer of the city in its beautification.

Mr. Delano said that the artistic excellence, not the size of Washington, will determine its future importance. Parks, he said, should be planned with a three-fold purpose—that of satisfying the visitor to the city, the worker in the city and the motorist who passes through the city. The planning of a city he asserted was a form of economy.

Art Development Traced.

Tracing the development of art through the past, Mr. Draper summarized the improvements instituted in the city since its planning. Conforming to the original plan of building, he suggested the feasible development of Washington. Landscape architecture, as the most beautifying factor in a city, he said, should be developed here.

In reference to parks, Mr. Draper pointed out that nearby locations could be utilized as memorial grounds. The Mount Vernon boulevard was, he said, in his estimation, but a beginning in the highways and grounds which will be devoted to parks in the vicinity of Washington. The plantations of the South were the inception of landscape art in America, he claimed.

F. A. Whiting, president of the federation, presided at the morning session of the meeting, and Leila Mechlin, secretary, submitted the annual report. A special exhibit of Mexican art was displayed at the hotel.

Stimulation of Arts.

The theme of the meeting, the president explained, was the stimulation of arts during the times of depression when there is a need of them. C. C. Zantzinger, vice president of the arts group, presided at the afternoon sessions.

A special exhibition of portraits of George Washington and his associates was opened to the attending members and guests last night at the Corcoran Art Gallery, and Mrs. McCook Knox, chairman of the Bicentennial portrait committee, gave a gallery talk on the exhibit. The public was admitted to the gallery during the display.

The subjects of today's sessions, which will begin at 10 a. m., are "Art and Leisure," "Art and Recreation" and "Art and Nature." Lectures, discussions and exhibits will be held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Scout Car 102 Makes Debut in Mt. Pleasant

This is just a special aside for the radio owners of the Mount Pleasant section, who are used to hearing "No. 10 scout car go to Umpty-Ump street, a fight," sandwiched in between Russ Columbo and Rudy Vallee.

A new character has been introduced over the police radio broadcasts. It is "Mount Pleasant scout car No. 102." The Tenth Precinct has been divided into two parts, with Thirteenth street as the dividing line. Scout car 10 takes all calls east of that street and 102 all calls to the west. In the future there will be no emergency car held at the station. The station is manned only by a desk clerk and a wagon crew.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD; COMPANION SOUGHT

A man who was found beside her body in a rooming house at 1430 Columbia road northwest, was being sought by police last night for questioning in connection with the mysterious death of Alice Leslie, 24 years old, supposedly from an illegal operation. An autopsy will be performed today in an effort to determine the exact cause of the young woman's death.

The case was reported to police by Dr. W. R. Gladding, of 3023 Fourteenth street northwest, who said he received a telephone call to come to the Columbia road address. Dr. Gladding said the Leslie woman was dead when he arrived and he sought to question the man he found there. Outside of giving his name as Frank Jones, of 932 Eighth street southeast, the physician could get no information from him.

When police arrived the man had disappeared. They believe he gave the physician a fictitious name. The owner of the rooming house said the man and woman, who said their names were Mr. and Mrs. Leslie, rented the room Sunday. The woman appeared in perfect health at the time. The girl's father, J. J. Leslie, of 2851 North Twentieth street, Philadelphia, was notified of her death.

ILL FATHER PLEADS FOR SON TO RETURN

Ira K. Gruver, Hurt in Crash Which Killed Wife, Seeks Boy, Also Injured.

"Dear Allen: Please come home, your father needs you. He will not live if you stay away."

This is the message that has been printed on hand bills and distributed throughout northern Virginia in the search for Allen Gruver, 18-year-old Hyattsville, Md., boy, who wandered off into the woods and has been missing since the automobile accident last Thursday, in which his mother was killed.

The search for young Gruver, which has been conducted daily since the crash on the Lee-Jackson highway, near Fairfax, Va., in which Mrs. Elizabeth Gruver was instantly killed, was shifted yesterday to Burke Station, about 10 miles from the scene of the accident, when a merchant there telephoned the sheriff that a youth answering the description of Gruver, purchased supplies at his store late Friday night and inquired his way to Washington.

A large posse of firemen from Hyattsville, Washington and Virginia assisted by residents and friends of the family immediately shifted the base of their 4-day search to Burke Station and began to scour the dense woods in that section. Police stated that they have no charges against the boy who was the driver of the car but they were anxious to return him to his father who was also badly injured in the accident. The youth was badly cut about the head and it is believed by many that his mind may have been affected from the shock of a blow on the head.

The poster circulated yesterday states that the boy is 18 years old, 5 feet and 5 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has light hair and when last seen was wearing a brown suit. He has a cut over the right eye and a cut on the left cheek. If seen it asks that he be held and his father, Ira K. Gruver, at Hyattsville, be notified.

Woman, Parked in Bus Zone, Wins Acquittal

Alice E. Willoughby yesterday won an acquittal of a charge of parking her automobile in a zone restricted for buses when Judge Isaac R. Hitt declared that "the streets of Washington can not be farmed out that way."

The judge said he had often observed large street spaces blocked off for special parking privileges and he dismissed the charge against the woman, who had parked her car in a space near the Union Station. She was arrested on the complaint of a bus employe.

G. O. P. of Capital Meets Tomorrow

Royal C. Johnson Is to Be Keynote Speaker at Headquarters.

Final plans for the State convention of Republicans of the District of Columbia were arranged last night at a meeting of the Republican State committee in and for the District of Columbia. The State group also elected officers for the ensuing four-year term.

Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota, will be the keynote speaker at the District convention tomorrow night at local Republican headquarters, Sixteenth street and Scott Circle. Delegates will be named for the national Republican convention at Chicago.

Officers of the State committee named last night are Samuel J. Prescott, chairman; Claude W. Owen, vice chairman; Joshua Evans, jr., secretary, and Edgar C. Snyder, treasurer.

Broker Sues for $18,200 In Analostan Island Sale

Albert J. Gore, a real estate broker, of 1508 H street northwest, yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme Court for a commission of $18,200 for the sale of Analostan Island to the Roosevelt Memorial Association by the Washington Gas Light Co.

Mr. Gore, through Attorneys Raymond F. Garrity and W. C. Sullivan, claimed he was employed by the gas company to negotiate the sale of the island to the association. The sale price of the island, he said, was $364,000.

Bookkeeper Charged With Stealing $581

On a charge of stealing $581 from the office of Charles E. Haury, supervisor of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Robert E. Benson, 25 years old, a bookkeeper, yesterday was held for the action of the grand jury on a $2,000 bond.

Haury recently figured in the news because of an attack made on him by a group of union employes opposed to his administration.

WAGE BILL DEFECTS ARE CITED BY BRIDE

Corporation Counsel Sends Report to House Group, Urging Changes.

Certain defects from the point of view of the District Commissioners in the bill relating to the rate of wages for laborers and mechanics employed by contractors and subcontractors on public buildings were cited in a report submitted yesterday by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and forwarded to the House committee on labor.

The effect of the measure, if adopted in its present form, "from the standpoint of the District of Columbia, will likely be to increase the cost of any construction undertakings of the municipality with its own labor without providing effective means of enforcing the wage provisions of its agreements with contractors upon public works," Mr. Bride said. He recommends that the bill be amended so as to make the penalties applicable to District as well as Federal Government projects.

The report also points out that one section of the measure would revolutionize the District Engineer Department wage scale as it provides that when the District "performs work by Government plant and hired labor which could have been performed under contract," it shall pay not less than the prevailing wage rate as established by the Secretary of Labor.

The discrepancy of these two wage scales is shown by a comparison of the maximum rate for painters of $7.60 a day in the District service and the $11 a day fixed by Secretary Doak in the dispute over the Internal Revenue Bureau job.

Post Introduces New Radio Artists

Alice Haig, Frances Hart and Olga Bedell Heard Over WOL.

Continuing an interesting series of short broadcasts, designed to initiate as many aspiring radio artists as possible to actual microphone experience, The Washington Post last evening introduced Miss Alice B. Haig, Miss Frances L. Hart and Miss Olga Bedell to the radio audience of station WOL.

Miss Haig, a lyric soprano, sang Brahm's "Cradle Song;" Miss Hart recited the celebrated poem of Paul Lawrence Dunbar, "When Melindy Sings," and Miss Bedell sang the popular composition, "In the Gloaming by the Fireside."

The program was also featured by an original piano composition of Roderick Dunlap.

American Legion Fiesta Scheduled for Tonight

The opening of the American Legion Bicentennial fiesta was postponed until tonight owing to the large number of attractions brought here by the Bernardi Greater Shows, which necessitated additional space for the show at Fourteenth and R streets southeast.

The fiesta is being held to raise funds for the Drum Corps of the American Legion to attend the national convention at Portland, Oreg.

GAS HEAD GROOMING DENIED BY LAMBERT

Company Counsel Scouts Report He Seeks to Replace Wood.

Wilton J. Lambert, general counsel of the Washington Gas Light Co., last night emphatically denied published reports that he is being groomed to replace George A. G. Wood as president of the gas company. The report, he said, is "absolutely without foundation."

Stockholders of the gas company met yesterday morning, but adjourned shortly afterward as a result of the order issued Saturday by the Public Utilities Commission prohibiting holders of the majority stock to vote it. President Wood ruled that a quorum was not present, and the meeting was postponed until May 18.

Another prevalent rumor yesterday with regard to the gas company's case was that Corcoran Thom, chief minority stockholder, has lined up with the Chase, Harris, Forbes Corporation and the Central Public Service Co., headed by Albert E. Peirce. Mr. Thom resigned last year as a director of the gas company after an apparent disagreement with the controlling interests.

The commission on Saturday ordered the foreign corporations which control the local gas concern to surrender their 84 per cent, or 109,176 shares of stock, on the ground that they held it in violation of the La Follette anti-merger act.

Kalorama Citizens Oppose School Cut

A resolution opposing any move to cut appropriations for the District school fund was adopted last night by the Kalorama Citizens Association. The association, while it did not oppose economy in Government, felt the school board had made great efforts to bring the system up to a high standard and that a cut in its funds would retard progress.

A resolution of condolence at the death of Mrs. Tracy Ansell, wife of the treasurer of the association, was adopted. Several reports on traffic matters were received.

Child Hurt by Auto Taken to Hospital

Suffers Head Injuries When She Darts Between Two Parked Cars.

A 4-year-old child was in a critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night after she was knocked down by an automobile near her home. She suffered severe head injuries.

Dolores Higgs, of 1224 G street southeast, darted out from between two cars parked on G street between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets southeast into the path of an automobile operated by Joseph D. Sheppard, 33 years old, of 3210 Seventeenth street northwest.

Sheppard was unable to stop his car in time to avoid hitting the little girl. He placed her in his car and hurried her to the hospital.

Circle Club to Be Hosts to Visiting Dignitaries and Guests Thursday.

As a climax to the convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs, now in session here, final arrangements for an elaborate reception and ball in honor of visiting officers and delegates were completed last night by the Circle Club of Master Masons, who are acting as official hosts to the hundreds of Masons who came here from all sections of the country.

The Circle Club, composed of Masons who are employed by the District government, has invited the heads of all Masonic bodies in Washington and grand masters of various jurisdictions to attend the ball, which will be held Thursday night in the Willard Hotel.

A program of entertainment, featuring the Vincent Lopez Club Orchestra, has been arranged and the affair is expected to be a highlight in the Masonic Week Bicentennial celebration.

Guests will include Senator Arthur Capper, Representative Mary T. Norton, Mrs. John Allen Daugherty, Walter F. Tidswell, prominent Masonic leader, and others.

Picture Drama of Mass Will Be Shown Tonight

The Rev. George A. Keith will present his picture drama, "The Sacred Love Story of the Mass," in the Church of the Nativity, 600 Georgia avenue, at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

The play will also be presented at St. Martin's Church, 1900 North Capitol street, 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

Man With Gashed Hand Is Sought as Store Thief

A man with a gashed hand was being sought by police last night as the burglar who made away with $30 worth of merchandise from the Livingstone Co., at 908 Seventh street northwest. Benjamin Goldstein, of 700 Otis street northwest, manager, found the plate glass window smashed and two coats missing when he opened up yesterday morning.

Police found spots of blood on the jagged bits of glass and concluded that the burglar must have smashed the window with his fist.

Youth, Neck Broken, Fights Death After Quest for Job

A youth who had fought the handicap of a broken neck in an effort to support himself through a long period of unemployment was in Georgetown University Hospital last night waging a battle for his life. An accident out in Oklahoma which took the lives of his mother and father left him with fractured vertebrae. That was eight months ago.

Despite that, the young man, Fred Firestone, about 22 years old, set out for the East in an effort to find work. He managed to make his way and sustain himself in a meager fashion until he reached Fredericksburg, Va., Sunday night. He collapsed on the street there.

Some one found him and sent him to a hospital. A string of rosary beads was found in the young man's pockets and the Rev. Joseph V. Brennan, pastor of St. Mary's parish in Fredericksburg, was called. He decided that what young Firestone needed was plenty of rest and medical treatment. He wrote a letter to the heads of Georgetown Hospital here and saw that Firestone made the Washington bus yesterday morning.

Firestone could not stand the jogging of the bus over the long road from Fredericksburg. He collapsed again. Another passenger, Jack Jackson, of Philadelphia, noticed his condition and urged the driver to greater speed.

Jackson drove the bus by a hospital as soon as Washington was reached. The bus stopped first at Emergency Hospital. As preparations were being made to admit the youth, Father Brennan's letter was found and he was transferred to Georgetown. His recovery is doubtful.

Police Dog, Ignoring Badge Of Law, Bites Patrolman

His master kept calling him a police dog, so the animal must have figured he was supposed to go for policemen every time he saw one. It is hard to figure animal psychology, but the dog did go for Private A. C. Poulsen, of the First Precinct.

The policeman was walking his beat at First and D streets northwest, bothering no one. A large police dog in a yard at 400 First street caught sight of the blue uniform and started barking forte. Poulsen did not pay much attention to the dog until the animal reared up on the iron fence surrounding the yard, leaned over and fastened his teeth in Poulsen's left arm just above the elbow.
